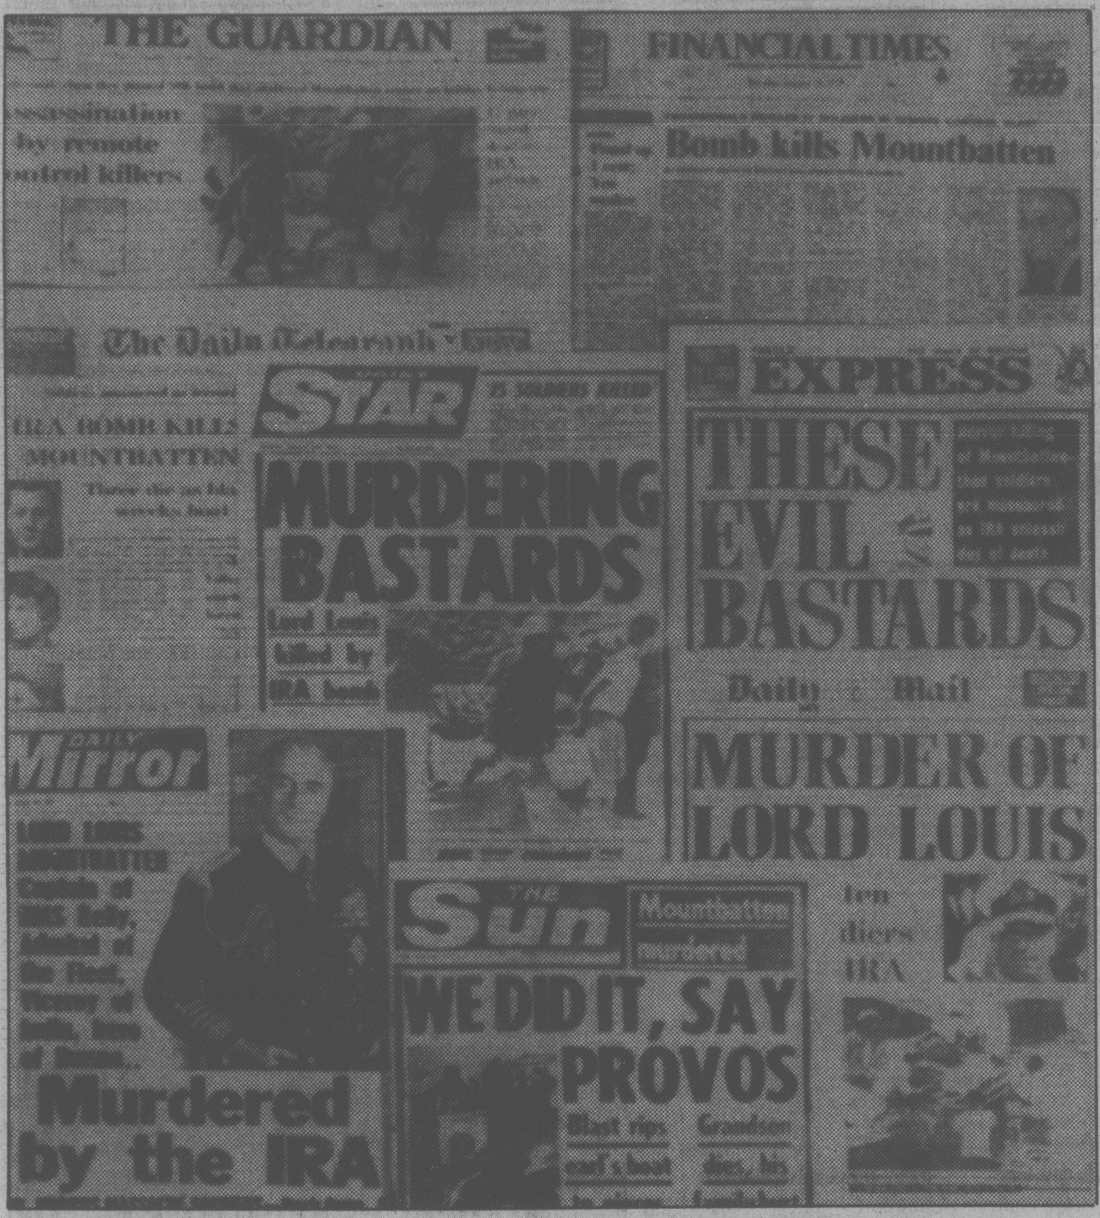
IRA attack enrages Britain



Britons awoke to these London newspaper headlines on Mountbatten murder

Times News Services

The IRA murder of Earl Louis Mountbatten has enraged Britain like no other terrorist attack during the past decade of violence and strife associated with Britain's presence in Northern Ireland.

The sentiments of the nation were perhaps summed-up by a weeping John Barratt, Mountbatten's personal secretary, who exclaimed: "May the IRA rot in hell, the bastards!"

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Mountbatten's murder and the killing of 18 British soldiers from ambush the same day has added another page to the IRA's "catalogue of atrocity and cowardice."

Britain, she vowed, "will wage war against terrorism with relentless determination until it is won."

Some of the soldiers were killed outside Warrenpoint, near the east coast of Northern Ireland, when a bomb concealed beneath straw in a parked truck was set off as an army truck and Jeep drove past on patrol. The rest died after reinforcements arrived and a second bomb in an abandoned building was set off.

Shortly after, IRA gunmen in ambush opened fire from across a canal that forms the border between Northern Ireland and the republic at that point. The soldiers returned the fire.

Meanwhile, police in Mullaghmore, Ireland, said today the bomb that killed Mountbatten and three other persons may have been hidden in a lobster pot and set off by remote control when their boat sailed past.

Local residents reported seeing two divers going into the water near the pots before dawn Sunday.

Police said it also was possible a diver had planted the bomb under the boat itself and had wired it to go off five minutes after the boat's engine started.

While most of the world, from Pope to peasant in Indian village, where Mountbatten served as last British viceroy, mourned Tom Duffy, a spokesman for the IRA movement in the United States, bragged today in New York that Mountbatten's murder was justified as an act of war.

"The Irish Republican Army is waging a war on behalf of the Irish nation," Duffy said in a statement. "All members of the enemy camp are legitimate targets.

"During the Second World War, Hirohito of Japan or Hitler of Germany were not considered immune from the Allied guns.

"We wonder why the sympathy and the tears are so selective. They worry about a 79-year-old man, but they haven't said a word about all the young people that were killed over the years."

The lunatic fringe on the other side is also in full cry.

A veteran living in Mountbatten's home village of Romsey, Kent, was quoted in a news broadcast as advocating a vigilante army of old sweats "to go over there and clean them out."

A caller to a phone-in radio show suggested sending every Irish-born person in Britain back to Ulster and turning Northern Ireland into one vast concentration camp under military rule.

IRA blasts British army band

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A powerful bomb ripped through the medieval Grand Place in the heart of Brussels today just minutes before a British military band was to give a concert.

Four members of the band were among the 16 injured.

The blast shattered windows throughout the historic square and wrecked the outdoor platform on which the visiting British band was to have given a concert.

Officials said the casualty toll would undoubtedly have been much higher had it not been for a traffic jam that delayed the arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh's Royal Regiment military band.

"We were lucky because we arrived late," said bandsman Jack Hardy of Gloucester. "We were held up by a traffic jam getting into Brussels."

Only a few bandsmen and stagehands were on the platform at the time of the blast, setting up instruments.

The blast ripped apart the heavy wood and metal stage. Twisted, broken instruments lay scattered on the cobblestoned ground along with shards of glass from dozens of shattered windows in the cafe-lined square.

Customers sipping drinks at an outdoor cafe near the stage dived for cover as debris showered down. They apparently escaped serious injury because the force of the blast was directed upwards, police said.

U.S. prime rate up to record high level

By LEE M. COHN
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The United States' prime rate on bank loans to corporations was raised to a record 12¼ per cent today, continuing the escalation of interest rates generally.

Analysts had expected the increase. Many of them predict further rises as the Federal Reserve pursues its fight against inflation and heavy loan demand by business persists.

Interest rate increases could deepen the recession. The economic decline eventually will halt and perhaps reverse the rise of interest rates. Some analysts believe the rate peak is only weeks away.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest U.S. bank, led off the increase in the prime rate from 12 to 12¼ per cent. Chase also led the move Aug. 15 From 11¾ to 12 per cent, which matched the record set in 1974 near the start of a recession.

Most other banks are expected to follow the rise to a 12¼ per cent prime rate, which is the interest charged by banks on loans to corporations with the best credit ratings. Rates on lower-grade business loans also may go up, but consumer credit and home mortgage loans are not directly related to the corporate prime rate.

The Federal Reserve under its new chairman, Paul A. Volcker, has been pushing interest rates up in an effort to fight domestic inflation and strengthen the dollar abroad by curbing excessive growth of the money supply. Aside from substance, Volcker believes the Fed must vigorously demonstrate its commitment to restraining the price spiral in order to change inflation pshychology.

The increase in the Fed's rate target to 11¼ per cent last Friday was the immediate trigger for today's prime rate rise.

Partly because of the Fed's efforts to restrain growth of money and credit by increasing interest rates, the cost to banks of raising money for relending has climbed. Banks raise the prime rate they charge partly to cover these increasing costs.

Strong demand for credit is the other key factor boosting the prime rate. That demand is reflected in rising rates on commercial paper IOUs through which corporations borrow from each other. Since rates are going up on this competitive source of credit, banks can raise their rates without losing customers.

Interest rates usually decline as business demand for credit slackens in recessions. Rates have stayed up so far because credit demand has not yet tapered off and because the Fed is trying to tighten supplies of credit to fight inflation.

In Victoria, the Royal Bank's regional manager Roger Hemeon today said the move would force Canadian interest rates up again.

He said Canadians should expect an identical quarter point increase, pushing the prime rate to 12.75 per cent from 12.5 per cent.

The hike, forced by the American increase, would

Soccer playoff on TV?

There may be good news yet for those thousands of Vancouver Island soccer fans and everyone else who failed to get tickets for Wednesday night's Whitecaps game.

BCTV and Whitecap brass were huddled today in a bid to televise live the Empire Stadium playoff game against the New York Cosmos.

Every available ticket for the game was snapped up by fans and scalpers in a record 9½ hours Tuesday.

Fans lined up six deep for more than three blocks to get tickets for the playoff contest.

Scalpers were buying up to 50 tickets each and selling them to fans at the end of the line for $50 a shot. The highest ticket price is normally $8.

Whitecaps public relations director, Josh Keller, says a lot of Whitecaps supporters buy tickets in block for their offices and there was no way the club could change its policy of no limits on numbers in time for the big game.

The Whitecaps defeated the Cosmos 4-1 and 4-2 in regular season games.

Gas price to top a dollar Thursday

The price of gasoline will rise at least 3.7 cents a gallon Thursday, pushing all Victoria-area pump prices for standard gas above $1 a gallon.

The present price at self-serve outlets is 97.9 or 21.2 a litre. The new prices Thursday will be at least $1.01.6 or 22 cents a litre.

Heating oil will also go up about three cents a gallon.

The gas increases are the result of two factors.

On July 1, Ottawa permitted the price of crude oil to rise $1 a gallon, sending the price of gasoline up 3.2 cents as of Aug. 30.

In addition, the federal government is adding half a cent a gallon to the price of gasoline for syncrude development.

John Plummer, provincial retail manager for Imperial Oil, said the 3.7 cents a gallon increase is automatic and will take effect as of midnight Wednesday.

The company had not yet decided whether to announce additional increases at the same time.

In Vancouver, where the price is 94.9 a gallon, three cents less than Victoria, oil companies are subsidizing the price by about 2 cents a gallon. If competition permits, oil companies would like to raise the price the additional two cents.

There is no subsidy in Victoria by Imperial but prices are considered to be artificially low in both cities. The markup would have to be increased at some point.

All oil companies will pass along the crude price increase in the form of higher gas prices on Thursday.

Street kids get little help

Shirley Wakeham offers cafe counselling

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

This is the last in a three-part series on Victoria's "street kids" — 13 and 14-year-olds whom Times reporter Derek Sidenius found living lonely and rebellious lives.

The worst that can be said about society's treatment of children is that it has done nothing to help kids with problems.

The best that can be said is it has tried to tackle those problems in a piecemeal fashion.

An example is the province's way of helping a mentally disturbed child who is disposed to violence.

If he's under 12, there are excellent facilities for him.

If he's over, forget it. There's next to nothing available.

When the Eric Martin Institution was built, a special ward was included for just such cases. But it's hardly ever been used.

There has never been the staff, never the money, a hospital spokesman said.

Where does he go for help? Nowhere.

And there are precious few counselling services offered for juvenile alcoholics.

George Stegan, executive director of the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society (DARS), admits little has been done in this area.

"We know damn well there's a problem, a growing problem. But it's been neglected."

It isn't DARS fault entirely, he says. The society gets its funds from the Alcohol and Drug Commission. The commission funds mainly adult programs.

There's not been the staff or the money to provide adequate youth counselling services or give kids in jails a level of care equivalent to that given adults.

The Victoria Youth Services Unit is only able to handle a maximum of 70 kids. The reason: there are only seven social workers on staff. What they can't manage has to be farmed out to other social agencies or groups, such as the YM-YWCA, or turned over to regular social workers who aren't always trained in dealing with children's problems.

Children held in the Juvenile Detention Home have been subjected to appalling conditions. Until only a few months ago, when long-awaited renovations started, the facility was grossly overcrowded, inadequately lit, and poorly ventilated.

The human resources ministry, for example, has set rigid policies which went into effect last December, denying any cash grants to youths under 19 and requiring all children 16 and under to be placed in foster homes. What about the 17 to 18-year-old group? They are caught in limbo, qualifying for neither the one, nor the other.

"The child doesn't stand a chance," said one social worker. "He gets labelled as a slow learner and is branded as a kind of lesser non-person. He's the dummy in the class.

"While his peers hold no contempt for him, the school system doesn't recognize him as a person deserving esteem."

The lack of regard for children's needs invariably shows up later with the child getting into conflict with the law.

But even at that stage there is often little attention — at the police level at least — directed towards the child's basic problem, whatever it might be.

There is an underlying philosophy that what you can't prevent, you contain.

But the policeman's ability to contain the problems has been far from successful and one of the reasons is a failure of police forces generally to concentrate their efforts on juvenile crime.

Only one police department on the Island has a juvenile crime squad — Victoria police. The Saanich force is in the throes of setting one up.

But the city juvenile squad is ridiculously small. Only two men are posted to the unit on a full-time basis, out of a complement of 139 officers.

The two officers are run off their feet. Juvenile crime accounts for a good third of all Criminl Code offences in the city.

As a consequence, many of the cases are turned over to regular patrolmen, who may or may not have the skills and expertise needed to deal with kids.

"It's a vicious circle but it's the best we can do," one officer said.

Juvenile problems and the breakdown of the family unit are so closely entwined it is impossible to consider one without the other.

"The family unit," said one social worker, "is fast becoming an endangered species."

Families are breaking up at an alarming rate. From 1961 to 1976 the number of divorces in the province shot up 500 per cent. The population increased only 50 per cent over the same period.

There's a marked increase, too, in the number of single women keeping children born out of wedlock. The incidence of young mothers in the 14 to 17-year-old group has soared 300 per cent in the past decade.

Shirley Wakeham, a community worker in Esquimalt says it is not unusual to find as many as 40 per cent of the students in some classrooms coming from single-parent families.

Troubles in the family unit are also apparent in the number of cases of child abuse.

The Toronto Institute of Family Violence estimates 150,000 kids are critically or severely abused in Canada each year, but only a small fraction are ever reported.

"Child abuse is not always an easy conclusion to come to," says Derek Pepper, director of social services at Royal Jubilee Hospital. "You may suspect abuse but it may not be provable."

There were 42 possible child-abuse victims admitted to RJH last year, up four from the previous year, but only 10 were deemed "probable" child-abuse cases.

Says Mrs. A, one mother trying to bring up two children on her own: "I feel like I'm on guard duty 24 hours a day and there's no one to take over for me."

Wakeham says a single mother faces an agonizing choice — either she gets a job, generally low-paying, and prays her kids can fend for themselves while she's at work, or she stays at home and relies on welfare.

Mrs. A elected the first option. But she wonders now if it was the wisest choice. She can barely manage on her salary. Recently she found some marijuana in her son's room and wonders what he's been up to when she's not at home.

She says she's tried to get help from human resources, but claims they will only help when things get really bad.

"I say I'm having a problem now and need help. I want to be able to prevent the problems from developing into something bad."

The welfare mother is generally even worse off. Invariably, she ends up living in second-class housing in neighborhoods that fester with social problems.

Wakeham says the long-term effects are as inimical to the mother as to the kids growing up in such an environment.

"Many of the long-term welfare clients haven't any idea how to take care of themselves. They don't have job skills, nor the resources to improve their lot.

"Here we encourage a woman to stay home and take care of her children. But what happens when the kids leave. The woman has got nothing."

Social workers and psychologists attribute the breakdown of families to the emergence of an attitude characterized as the 'Me Generation.'

Says RJH's Pepper: "Kids coming out of school discover the world doesn't owe them anything and doesn't even really know how to accommodate them.

"They end up on the streets; they turn to analgesics like alcohol; and if they aren't trained to do anything, which is often the case with kids leaving school, they find they've got nothing when they come out.

"In the old days the child's grandfather or father 'spoke for' the child to help him get a job.

"The stress has been on the child making it on his own, urged on by parents who say they made it on their own so why can't their children too.

"Parental responsibility seems to have fallen by the wayside."

Social workers are disturbed by this development because it means more and more children are having to look to society for guidance.

Indeed, it is just the opposite: the values society imposes and the examples it sets often just compound the problems kids are facing.

Stegan, of DARS, says the incidence of drinking has increased dramatically over the past two decades. In 1960 about 40 per cent of the adult population consumed alcohol. Today it's more than 80 per cent.

"It's a mood-altering mechanism," he says. "Anxiety is a dirty word nowadays. But the fact is most people drink just to get high."

And the example is being followed by more and more kids.

A survey undertaken by a UVic psychology student last year revealed 83 per cent of the high school students here have tried alcohol, with more than half stating they were regular users.

Stegan says if drinking isn't brought under greater moderation "we're in for some pretty serious things in the next 10 years."

Society's growing acceptance of abortions, and the concommitant erosion of the sanctity of birth is also seen by some psychologists as a major factor warping kids' views on life.

Last year there were 66 abortions for every 100 live births in Victoria's two major hospitals, an increase of about 10 per cent over 1975. The ratio is expected to climb again this year.

Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Phillip Ney, an ardent Pro-Lifer, believes this trend is causing kids to have grave doubts about whether their parents really wanted them. The notion, the child stands alone, is only reinforced, he says.

"The only way I see improvement is through the reintegration of the family and get parents more involved with what their kids are doing."

For starters, he says, parents should be made more welcome in the schools.

"Our PTAs should be concerned not so much with how Johnny is doing in school as how his parents can become more involved in school life."

Anger at IRA grips Britain

From his Castel Gandolfo summer residence southeast of Rome, Pope John Paul, who is to visit Ireland early next month, praised Mountbatten as "a courageous man whose death causes great suffering to the royal family and to all the nation.

"This act of shocking violence is an insult to human dignity and I firmly condemn it," the pope said.

Basil Cardinal Hume, archbishop of Westminster, called Mountbatten's murder and the ambush of a British army patrol in Northern Ireland Tuesday "evil and criminal" acts.

"No claim to patriotism or political ideas can justify murder by self-appointed killers... The Catholic community in England and Wales mourns (Mountbatten's) cruel death, those of his companions, and the loss of so many young lives in the County Down ambush," the cardinal said.

Gen. Jacques Dextraze, former chief of staff of the Canadian Armed Forces, described Mountbatten as a man who worked for world unity. Dextraze said he had carried on admirably in India where he was viceroy in 1947-48 despite a serious threat of civil war.

In New Delhi, where Mountbatten's name is still a household word more than 30 years after he ended British rule, officials ordered government offices throughout the country to remain closed today as a mark of respect. A week of public mourning has been declared on the subcontinent.

Mrs. Gandhi, daughter of the late Jawaharlal Nehru, a friend of Mountbatten in post-war India, described him as "an extraordinary personality and born leader of men."

Rear-Admiral George Green, South Africa's chief of naval staff who once served under Lord Mountbatten, said: "He was a British sailor of the calibre of Nelson. He had a tremendous capacity for work and had a hand in shaping the destinies of millions of people."

In Brussels, NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns called him one of Britain's "great servants in war and peace."

In Washington, the state department issued a statement saying the U.S. government was deeply saddened by the death, calling Mountbatten "one of the greatest military leaders and statesmen of our day.

"Americans will especially recall his contribution to our common cause in the Second World War, as well as his many services to this country and to the world since then."

(The Association Press reports that President Carter said Monday night he was "profoundly shocked and saddened by the tragic and violent death" of Earl Mountbatten.

(The AP adds that in a statement issued at the White House, Carter praised the the earl as "a leader of monumental ability."

("Here in the United States his memory is enshrined for the paramount role he played in achieving victory for the allied forces during the Second World War," Carter said.)

Moutbatten's funeral will be held at Westminster Abbey either next Wednesday or Thursday, Buckingham Palace announced Monday night.

A palace spokesman said the Royal Family will attend the service. He added that the earl's nephew, Prince Philip who is in northern France, and his grand-nephew, Prince Charles who is on vacation in Iceland, are due to return to London today.

The spokesman said Mounbatten will be buried in a private ceremony at Romsey Abbey, Hampshire, southern England, near his country home.

Art Carney in hospital

Actor Art Carney has been transferred to the intensive-care unit of Middlesex Memorial Hospital for observation of several ailments including chest pain, his physician says.

Carney, 60, was admitted to the hospital after complaining of a variety of symptoms. He was transferred to the intensive-care unit Monday after he had arrhythmias, or irregular heartbeats, and some chest pain, said Dr. Roger Cyrus.

Recently, Carney has been working in Las Vegas on a film called Going in Style, which also stars George Burns and Lee Strasberg.

A convicted robber who says bank robbery is a form of social protest was found guilty Monday of robbing the same bank twice.

It took a U.S. federal court jury less than five minutes to find Riley Ray Fultz, 36, of Houston, Tex., guilty on two counts of armed robbery. His trial lasted less than four hours.

Fultz insisted on acting as his own attorney and then, in a fit of pique, refused to speak.

He was angered when Judge Bailey Brown told him at the start of the trial that he could not use a "mental defect" defense unless he agreed to undergo psychiatric testing.

"I'm going to sit here mute, that's it," Fultz said.

In a pre-trial interview, Fultz said he viewed bank robbery as a means of protesting his displeasure with his life and the state of the country.

"Some people picket — I rob banks," he said.

Aaren Simpson, the 23-month-old daughter of football star O.J. Simpson and his former wife Marguerite, is dead as the result of a swimming pool accident.

The little girl, found motionless on the bottom of a pool at her home Aug. 18, was taken to UCLA Medical Centre but never regained consciousness and died Sunday night.

The cause of death was given as "respiratory failure due to drowning."

The Simpsons, who were divorced earlier this year, have two other children, Arnelle, 10, and Jason, 9.

"Can you imagine an eight-storey ramp?" Ken Carter was saying. "Can you imagine a car coming off that ramp at 400 kilometres an hour? With two rockets? One on the ground and one on the ramp?"

Carter's interviewer admitted he had trouble imagining it. With good reason. He was being told that sometime over the Labor Day weekend, whenever the weather conditions are right, Carter will try to leap 915 metres in a car, across the St. Lawrence Seaway from Canada to Ogdensberg, N.Y.

Considering that that's seven times as far as any car has ever leaped, it seemed like a tall order. But Carter insisted that his $200,000 rocket-powered car, getting 45 gallons to the kilometre, was up to the task.

Prosecutors have decided not to drop a robbery charge against Rev. Bernard Pagano until they investigate the confession of a man who admits having undergone psychiatric treatment recently.

Assistant District Attorney Robert DiOrio met Monday with Ronald Clouser, 39, of Brookhaven, who has confessed involvement in a series of Delaware robberies in which the Roman Catholic priest was charged.

The Delaware County prosecutor said Clouser has agreed to submit to a lie-detector test later this week.

Pagano had been scheduled to go on trial for the attempted robbery Sept. 5, but his lawyers have indicated they will seek a continuance pending outcome of the investigation, DiOrio said.

And finally . . . with seeds from his jumbo watermelon selling for about $8 apiece, Ivan Bright is not too upset that he missed a chance at a $10,000 prize by just a few pounds.

Bright's watermelon gained eight ounces in three hours to weigh in at 200 pounds at 9:30 a.m. Sunday, but that was 33½ hours too late to collect the big money.

Hope, a town of 9,000 is the self-proclaimed watermelon capital of the world, and the local Advertisement and Tourism Commission had offered $10,000 to the farmer who could produce a 200-pound melon by midnight Friday night.

'30s gangster Alvin Karpis dies in Spain

'CREEPY' KARPIS
. . . 'Pill overdose

TORREMOLINOS, Spain (AP) — Montreal-born Gangster Alvin Karpis of the 1930s Ma Barker gang has been found dead in his Torremolinos apartment, and official sources indicated an overdose of sleeping pills was suspected. He was 71.

The judge-instructor's office said the body was found by a neighbor on Sunday. A police source said sleeping pills were nearby. An official said death did not appear to be due to natural causes, and an autopsy was being performed today.

The Canadian consulate said Karpis, who was a Canadian citizen, will be buried locally.

The consulate said Karpis registered as a resident of Spain in 1973, four years after his release from a U.S. penitentiary where he served a sentence for bank robbery.

The judge-instructor's office said he lived alone here on the Costa del Sol, Spain's famed sun coast.

The Barker gang consisted of Ma Barker, her four sons, her lover Arthur Dunlop and Karpis. It became notorious in the 1930s with a series of holdings and kidnappings that put it on the FBI's most wanted list.

Ballerina back in Moscow

Ordeal over, Vlasova hugs her mother

MOSCOW (AP) — Bolshoi ballerina Ludmilla Vlasova was welcomed with bouquets when she returned to the Soviet Union today after spending more than 70 hours inside an Aeroflot plane grounded at New York's Kennedy Airport on U.S. orders.

The jetliner had been detained in New York while U.S. authorities sought assurances she was leaving voluntarily.

Surrounded by a crowd of Soviet and Western reporters, Miss Vlasova said she was "too tired" to talk about her ordeal. She was driven off in a grey sedan.

The Aeroflot Ilyushin-62 that had been grounded at Kennedy Airport for more than three days landed at the Moscow airport shortly after 10 a.m., Moscow time.

Alexandra Drozhdina, the ballerina's mother, stood at the foot of the airplane ramp as her daughter, looking fresh and smiling, descended into her arms.

Miss Vlasova and her mother were surrounded by security men as they headed through an airport lounge to the waiting car.

U.S. and Soviet officials agree the 73½-hour showdown over ballerina Miss Vlasova's departure from the United States might have been settled long before a compromise finally cleared the way for her return to Moscow.

But they disagreed Monday on who was to blame for the episode, each saying the other was at fault in the diplomatic stalemate.

Tanker safe after fire

BAHRAIN (Reuter) — A fire aboard the 23,759-ton Liberian-registered Putianna carrying crude oil to Aden has been brought under control, the ship's agents said today.

The tanker's Greek crew of 49 was rescued after the vessel caught fire on its way from Das Island in the Persian Gulf. The official emirates news agency Wam ruled out sabotage and said the fire broke out in the engine room.

Officials of the Gulf Shipping Agency said Monday that three explosions took place on the Putianna, but Wam said the vessel's captain told police there had been no explosion aboard the tanker.

Authorities in the United Arab Emirates were considering towing or refloating a second tanker, the 29,000-ton Singapore-registered Cherry Duke, which sank after an explosion on Sunday. One crew member was killed, two were injured and five of the all-Filipino crew are missing after the blast off Das Island.

A spokesman for the Abu Dhabi Marine Operating Company said the vessel was lying in 20 meters of water, but posed no threat to an underwater oil pipeline.

A tragic punctuation mark

No matter what the circumstances, the death of Earl Mountbatten of Burma would have been a great loss to Britain and to the Commonwealth.

Mountbatten was viewed with the fondness that most Britons reserve for members of the royal family. He had a special place in many hearts as the man who raised Prince Philip and brought him and Queen Elizabeth together.

But even more important, Mountbatten was one of the few remaining true heroes of our time. His combat record during the Second World War was one of the most distinguished of any commander.

His physical courage became legendary: once when fighting during the war in Burma, he was told he might lose an eye unless he stopped to have a wound treated. His response: "I'd rather lose an eye than Kohima (the strategic place for which he was battling)."

But courage alone does not make heroes any more, and Mountbatten added to his reputation with his work as statesman in peace time. In this role, he was best known as the last viceroy of India, the architect of Indian and Pakistani independence. Later he assumed command of Britain's armed forces, and in this role, modernized the British Navy. He also remained to his death a close adviser to the Queen and Prince Philip.

He will be sadly missed by veterans, Britons and all citizens of the Commonwealth.

The manner of his death, however, makes the event doubly tragic. For Mountbatten did not die the peaceful death of the elder statesman. Instead, he became a casualty of war — not a war in which he himself was fighting or commanding troops, but a civil war in which he was no more than the symbol of a hated country.

His death, and the deaths of the young people with him and later of British soldiers in bombs and ambushes point up again the pitiful waste of human life that has been occurring in Northern Ireland for the past decade. The murder and maiming of civilians and British soldiers has become a muted, accustomed pattern in Belfast and surrounding territories, interrupted occasionally with the punctuation mark of an assassination of a well-known figure. War has become part of the way of life in that country.

Britons and others who loved Mountbatten are rightly outraged at his death and are demanding vengeance by the government. And, indeed if the perpetrators of the assassination are caught, the full force of the law should be brought against them.

Yet it must also be remembered that the punishment of the four, or six, or eight people responsible for planting the bomb on the boat will do little to stop future killings. These terrorists see themselves not as murderers but as men fighting a Holy War, and jail for a few of their comrades will not change that.

Until a peaceful solution to the civil war in Northern Ireland is found, we can be sure that the pattern of killing and bombing will go on. We can be sure too that it will be interrupted occasionally by more tragic punctuation marks like the death of Earl Mountbatten.

Heels and wheels

Is it by design or coincidence that the sellers of lifestyle manage to bless the masses with diverse yet, upon closer scrutiny, compatible products at the same time?

The target consumers in this case are women. The products are footwear and automobiles. As incongruous as those items may sound, the deisgners of the two fashions may stumble into each others' arms in pursuit of the prefect promotion scheme.

The rage in women's footwear these days is heels, heels that are reaching heights in excess of four and a half inches.

Shoe stores in Vancouver and other centers are reporting brisk sales from women interested in a long, leggy look, despite warnings from chiropractors that the shoes were not designed for healthful walking. Regardless of sex, fashion is addictive, and the women who wear the shoes say the benefits outweigh the discomfort. Who wants to argue?

From Eastern Canada comes the Eagle. It's one of the new cars in the American Motor Corporation's fall parade. The Eagle is a four-wheel-drive car that has been made, the promoters say, to appeal especially to women.

AMC dominates the four-wheel drive market in North America with its various Jeep models. But company president William Pickett says "it's hard to get women behind the wheel of a Jeep, it's not their style. So why not give them a vehicle that looks like a car, but is a Jeep underneath."

We're not sure if the four-wheel drive car will appeal to the women who wear high-heeled shoes. But if the correlation can be made, what luck for the promotion people?

High-heeled shoes are notorious for discomfort on long walks. Four-wheel drives are notorious for their ability to stay going, despite weather and terrain. It's with confidence a woman wearing high heels could climb into her four by four during a snowstorm and expect to reach her destination without having to leave her vehicle. It's bad enough at the best of times having to walk to call a towtruck. But being clad in heels would not only be hard on the back, but hard on the image of today's woman.

Heels and wheels — were you made for each other?

MICHAEL VALPY

JERUSALEM — Well, I've looked over Jordan.

And what you see is a mucky brown creek about two feet wide, slopping — flowing would be too grand a word — slopping non-descriptly and with difficulty through some reeds.

It is, without ceremonial announcement or impressive vista, just there — around a turn on the cracked and pot-holed asphalt road approaching from the Jordanian side.

Some bushes. A dirty-yellow-walled hut with someone inside selling soft drinks. A few men standing outside, two of them splashing water on their faces from a metal trough against the wall. A truck, some buses, waiting. A great number of flies.

And at the other end of the bridge, a blue-and-white star-of-David flag flopping over a barbed-wired-surrounded bunker, and, visible from beneath the bunker's khaki canvas shade, the tops of heads of Israeli soldiers and the snout of a machine-gun pointed dead-centre down the roadway.

More needed

The river Jordan.

It strikes at credibility.

The imagination demands a more majestic body of water than this tiny, muddy finger-tracing in the desert where John baptised Jesus and where the latest pair of armies on this inexhaustible battleground face each other. Israelis on the occupied West Bank, Jordanians across from them.

The mind also wants something more for what is called the King Hussein bridge, formerly the Allenby Bridge (or, on Israeli maps, simply, "bridge" — nomenclature that is by far the most accurate reflection of reality). Something more than the 25-metre long structure of unpainted planks and two-by-fours that would raise mothers' cries of "unsafe" on a British Columbian country road.

For the trouble it took me to get here and get across, the mind would very much like something more. Sweet chariots or a band of angels.

The basic problem for the tourist wanting to travel into Israel from Jordan directly — that is, without flying out to Cyprus and back — is that it provides both sides with the opportunity to unleash untrammelled bureaucracy.

Both sides have excuses. The Jordanians have to suffer the humiliation of issuing permits for people to travel from one part of their country to another part, now under foreign occupation. The Israelis have to stop people from bringing in things with which to kill Israelis.

But it still took 13 hours — if you include the four hours spent at Jordan's ministry of the interior — to go the 88 kilometres from Amman to Jerusalem. Jordanian bus up to the Israeli army base just across the river, Israeli taxi the rest of the way.

Special fury is reserved for the Jordanian public servant in room 2 of the ministry of the interior building who took my application for a crossing permit and handed me back a mimeographed slip of paper in Arabic.

"What does it say?" I asked.

"I'm busy. Go away," he said.

"I cannot read Arabic," I said.

"It says come back Thursday. Go away," he said.

This was Tuesday. I went back to my hotel and, some hours later in the lobby, came across a touring American businessman whom I had also seen at the ministry building.

"Did you run into the guy who said come back Thursday?" he asked.

"Yes," I said.

"They're closed Thursday. It's a religious holiday," he said.

The swine.

The American businessman, having discovered this, had gone to some police building, raised a small fuss, and had been told that if he returned to the interior ministry sharp at 9 a.m. Wednesday when it opened, he would get his permit.

We went out together, at 8.45.

The ministry did not open at 9, it opened at 9:30. Room 2 did not open at 9:30, it opened at 10.

"I want my permit," I said to the man in room 2. A pile of permits sat on his desk.

"Where is your paper," he asked.

I gave him the paper that said come back Thursday. "It says come back Thursday. Go away," he said.

"You're closed Thursday," I said. I then hit his desk with my fist and said: "I am a Canadian journalist and I have people to meet in Jerusalem tomorrow and I want my permit." I have never before hit anyone's desk with my fist.

"Go to room 5," he said.

I went to room 5. A few minutes later, someone brought in the pile of permits that had been sitting on the desk of the man in room 2. Mine was among them.

There was then a three-hour wait to have my permit retyped.

The Israelis, in contrast, were efficient. But careful.

Four passport checks. An electronic body scan. The item-by-item examination of the contents of my luggage.

Typewriter, camera

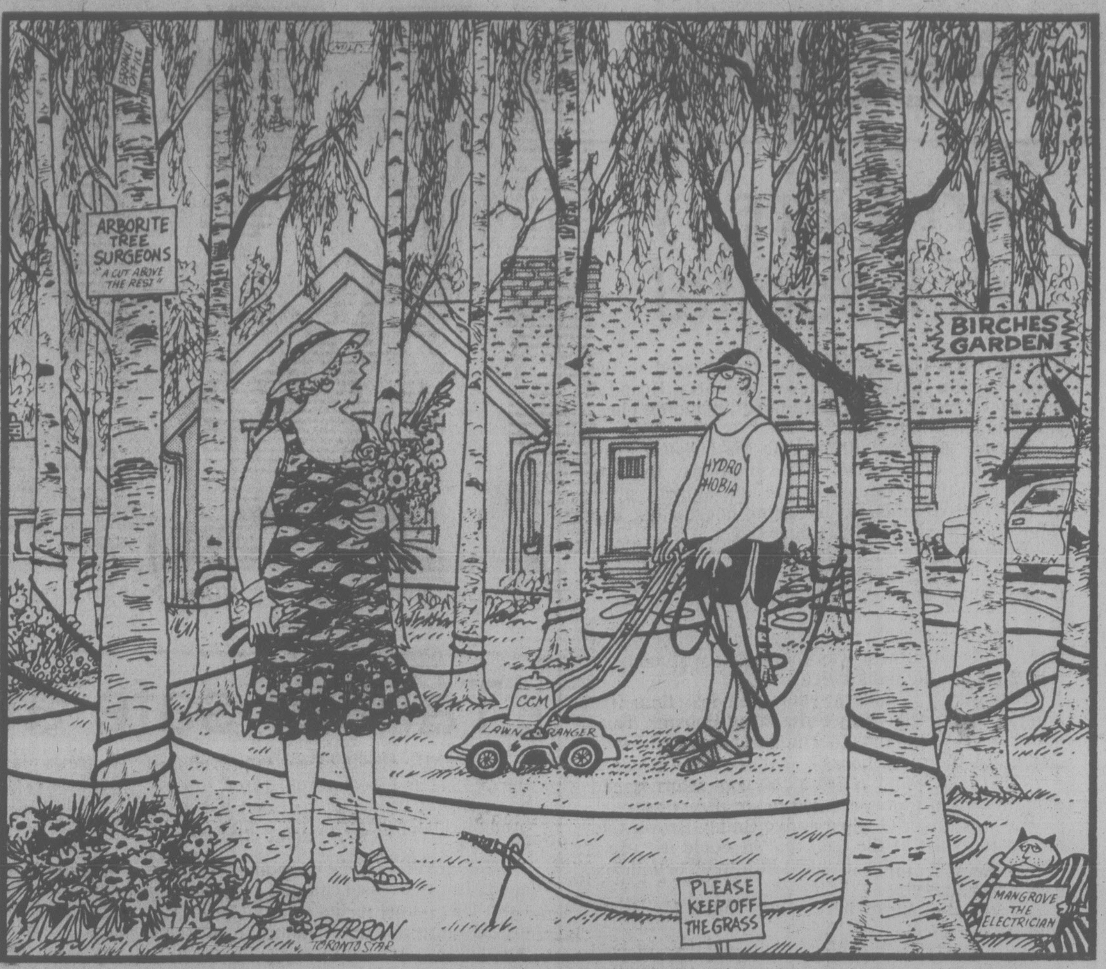
An on-the-job instruction course from one soldier to another — the young woman going through my baggage in the army compound near the river — on how to examine a typewriter. A conversation between the two soldiers over my guerrilla liberation-struggle posters from Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

An order from the woman soldier to aim my camera at the ceiling of the examination room and click off one frame.

An x-ray of my emptied suitcase and of my wooden Dhow-building drill that someone had given me in Kuwait.

"Jeez," said a revolting American named Russell George McDonald of Pine Grove, Calif., watching over my shoulder and snapping gum in my ear as the soldier went through my possessions, "you've sure got a lot of stuff." He had earlier laughed when I opened my suitcase the wrong way and everything fell on the floor.

Unfortunately, he also shared a taxi with me to Jerusalem.



"But I've always wanted a house with lots of trees. Move back to town or get another 50 feet of cord."

No consultation

Having written several letters to city bureaucrats with no satisfactory response, we have decided to take this avenue to address our grievances against B.C. Hydro for instituting a bus route along once peaceful Richardson Street.

The part of the route in question — between Cook and Moss Streets — poses, because of the narrowness of the street, a hazard to cyclists who are forced to dodge around gaping drains with a bus at their elbow. The roar of the pollution—spewing engines wakens late sleepers, precludes early retiring, drowns out radio and TV and wakens babies at all hours.

The new bus stops make residential parking a real problem. A once peaceful Fairfield neighborhood has been transformed into a Los Angeles freeway.

The residents were not consulted and no explanation has risen out of the murk of bureaucracy in response to our letters of question and protest. Are the crippling machines of 20th century technological convenience always to take precedence over human needs? — J. W. Richey, Kjustin Mathot, Richard Hemingway, Victoria.

Will buses turn quiet streets into busy routes like Douglas?

A student problem

Recently there has been mention in the media of walkouts and union problems as well as layoffs in local hospitals jeopardizing the quality of health care among our citizens.

What I have observed in a couple of area hospitals is that students from a local college take their practical training during their respective medical courses. It is to their benefit that they receive first hand knowledge of the field in which they are pursuing.

The issue at hand is that during the course of their practical experience as unskilled students, that aren't fully experienced, they are assigned to wards with little or no qualified supervision.

On a few occasions, regular staff members have booked off sick or are late for work. This can happen to anyone at anytime but instead of the proper procedure of calling a regular on-call member, a student is assigned to the ward depriving a qualified union member a chance to work.

This not only causes hard feelings between union members and hospitals but also puts the student in a precarious position knowing that it may cause hard feelings between staff members and the learning unpaid student.

Maybe if the students were to observe and work side by side with a qualified supervisor there wouldn't be as many layoffs or cutbacks thus easing the existing union and management problems and increasing the health care quality.

This may or may not solve some of the problems but inevitably will improve the quality of the student upon graduation as well as securing the much needed harmony in our hospitals. — M. Booth, Victoria.

A different view

Environment Minister Rafe Mair's recent letter to the editor (The facts on Shaffer report, Times, Aug. 16) regarding the Shaffer report and the Cheekeye-Dunsmuir power line is orchestrated outrage of the highest order.

Mr. Mair blusters about in his long-winded lawyer's fashion in a letter that covers fully one-quarter of a newspaper page. Mr. Mair points to the secretariat of the Environment and Land Use Committee, to B.C. Hydro, to a newspaper reporter's deadlines and to the "pressure of ministerial duties" as the reasons for the bad publicity he received regarding the release of the Shaffer report.

Mr. Mair protests too much. The simple and straightforward facts are these: On July 11 during his estimates, I asked Mr. Mair about the report the secretariat had done on the Cheekeye-Dunsmuir line. If he was as genuine and sincere as he makes out, I would have had that report on July 12. Instead, for political advantage, Mr. Mair did not release the 18-page report until the second week of August. There were even occasions in July when Mr. Mair denied the report existed. No amount of bleating about his ignorance over the adjournment of the House or whatever other excuse he dreams up will suffice.

The fact remains — in the second week of July Mr. Mair was asked about the report and in the second week of August he released the report. Not only had the contract been awarded by then but the House had also adjourned. Mr. Mair stretches coincidence beyond the point of belief if he wishes us to dismiss "the impression" that he allowed the line to go ahead with an adverse report in his possession. His conduct was inexcusable. — Don Lockstead, MLA, Mackenzie.

FAIR is unfair

"Who knows what the Government will dream up tomorrow to solve the problems created by its previous dreams?" (Harry Browne — 1978).

Our government has now legislated 'discrimination' into a dirty word like 'racism', and ICBC has been quick to use this as an excuse to raise its tax bite.

It is an undeniable fact that women drivers have a lower accident rate than men, Shouldn't we applaud, and recognize this fact with lower insurance premia? Otherwise, we are failing to discriminate between good and evil. Taking it further, I can even foresee bright lawyers getting criminals off the hook on the grounds that the poor fellows must not discriminate between what is theirs and what is ours!

Let's stop this government madness before it goes too far. The best way out of this extraordinary and costly muddle is to repeal the original 'anti-discrimination law'.

Dump in the sun

I applaud your correspondent Mr. W. White (Times, Aug. 20) in his efforts to dispel the amazing clouds of ignorance that surround this subject. If all energy were provided by nuclear fission, it is estimated that the total wastes produced by the energy used by one man in his whole lifetime, can be nicely immobilized in a vitreous disc about 13 centimetres in diameter and five centimetres or so thick.

But there is a much better way which no one seems to have discussed to far. The U.S. Space Shuttle will shortly be operational. All that is needed is to put the wastes (preferably vitrified) into orbit, and then, at the right moment, fire them backward along our path.

Once their speed drops below 30 kilometres per second (the earth's orbital speed about the sun) the wastes will fall into the sun. With a mass 333 thousand times that of the earth, the solar nuclear furnace will absorb anything we can send, without the slightest blink! — Roger Napier, 80 King George Terrace.

Scooter havoc

Once again we've had another close call with a motor—scooter. Is this type of machine a motor vehicle or a glorified bicycle and when do they follow the laws of the road?

If licenced scooters can travel on highway shoulders dangerously but legally, why can't motorcycles or semi-trailers do so when they need to?

When travelling in the city the scooters still pass on the right creating havoc with other drivers.

A scooter with its motor running is declared a motor vehicle according to the motor vehicle branch.

So if you're stuck behind one with parked cars on one side and a solid line on the other, it's a traffic violation to pass it unless the operator is peddling with the motor turned off.

If you plan on purchasing a motor—scooter, for your safety either buy a bicycle or a motorcycle which can keep up to speed limits, then drivers would be more familiar with your actions. — Anne Grahn, Ken Gray, 2312 Wark Street.

Seems unfair

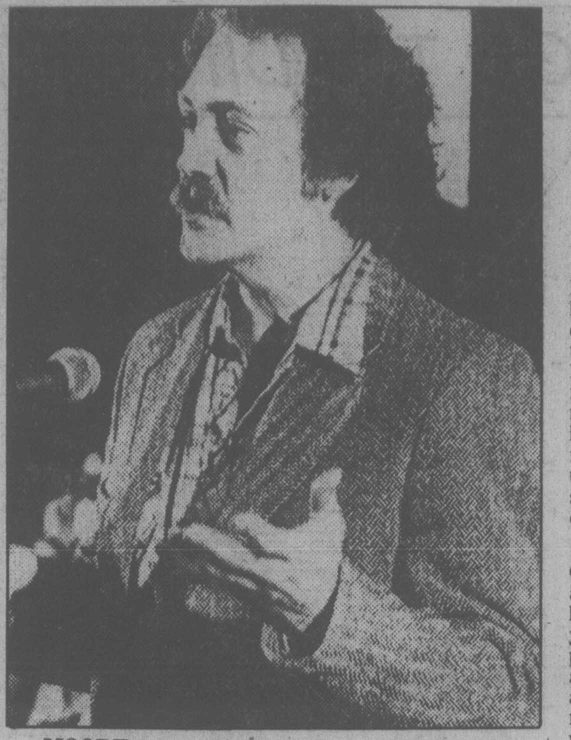
I am 62 years old and in receipt of a disability pension from Ottawa. I also receive a GAIN supplement to provide a mincome figure. I have been advised by the human resources department of the government of B.C. that my GAIN supplement will be reduced in relation to any increase from Ottawa to maintain that mincome level, and that I am expected to notify them of any further increases from Ottawa. I was under the impression that these increases were intended to keep abreast of any increase in the cost of living and therefore prevent the recipient from experiencing a loss in purchasing power. I would be interested in hearing from anyone else in this position as I may have misinterpreted the situation.

After all, it doesn't seem reasonable that one government would attempt to benefit from the practical policy of another. — Leslie A. Priestley, 5 - 1321 Broad Street.

Greenpeace must get its act together

By MICHAEL M'GONIGLE

(M'Gonigle, of Victoria, is a lawyer, environmentalist and adviser to Greenpeace international who has attended a number of International Whaling Commission meetings)



MOORE . . . 'wants recognition without work'

One of the more interesting sidelights of the environmental movement over the last few years has been the activities of Vancouver's Greenpeace Foundation. Yet recently Greenpeace has begun to get a bad name among Canadians. And with its U.S. lawsuit against its sister organization in San Francisco, the Vancouver group threatens to destroy not only itself but a significant part of the world environment movement as well.

The court case stems from Greenpeace Vancouver's claim to be the founder and head office of the worldwide Greenpeace organization. It alleges that an independent San Francisco office is infringing Vancouver's trademark by its unauthorized use of the name Greenpeace.

The whole environmental movement of which Greenpeace is a part is being tarnished and damaged by this action. Yet with a captive audience in Vancouver, Greenpeace's Vancouver president, Dr. Patrick Moore, has been able to make numerous wild statements and to do so unchallenged.

He can do that, despite a significant amount of dissatisfaction in the Vancouver organization, because others are too loyal to the environmental cause to challenge him. Now, unfortunately, it seems as if only such a public discussion might clear the air.

My affiliation with Greenpeace began about three years ago. At that time I was living in Vancouver and I approached the office and offered to act as aboserver for it and the other offices at the meetings of the International Whaling Commission.

In this "advising" capacity I have been able to observe first-hand the organization in operation — in Vancouver, Hawaii, San Francisco, London, and other places. As an occasional participant I might claim to be an inside but independent observer.

Moore has pictured himself as a beleaguered hardcore environmentalist confronting dissident newcomers abroad whom he characterizes as professional dropouts and parasites and opportunists.

To Vancouverites, Greenpeace does indeed have roots in the area. But it was David McTaggart who, with his world-renowned voyages into the French nuclear test zone and his subsequent court cases, really gave the organization its reason for being in its early years.

In his recent book (Greenpeace III — Journey into the Bomb) McTaggart says that when he came to Vancouver after the voyage there was no functioning Greenpeace organization at all.

McTaggart has since founded Greenpeace Europe. Yet Moore also criticizes him for his refusal to acknowledge that Moore is president of an international Greenpeace Foundation.

But the history is in any event only one aspect of the whole issue. The important point is that Greenpeace Vancouver has not shown itself competent to run an international organization.

Environmental movement hurt by Vancouver branch lawsuit

A useful comparison might be made to Greenpeace Europe. On my recent visit there to attend the meetings of the Whaling Commission I was overwhelmed by the vivid fact that Europe is now alive to the issues of whale conservation and nuclear dumping.

That results not only from Greenpeace Europe's own intense campaigns and media efforts but also from thoughtful arguments and a clear strategic concern with achieving a political objective.

That is to be contrasted with Vancouver Greenpeace's obsessive concern with, in Bob Hunter's words, dropping media mind bombs. Only column inches count. The arduous process of challenging the basis of international whale management, for example, was dismissed as number-juggling.

If the Greenpeace image is tarnished in Canada it is precisely because of that lack of a conception of larger goals.

There are numerous examples of the Vancouver organization's half-hearted support for causes other than its own immediate image.

Nowhere was that attitude clearer than at this year's meeting of the International Whaling Commission. Preparation for it began almost a year ago when Greenpeace Europe initiated a meeting in the San Francisco office to get on the agenda the pelagic moratorium (a moratorium on long-distance whaling with factory ships).

Though invited, no one from Vancouver attended that meeting — yet it was the pelagic moratorium that was accepted in London last month.

At the commission meeting itself, Greenpeace Vancouver again demonstrated its faded colors. Moore was present (for the first time) but played no role whatever in the negotiations. Meanwhile, Greenpeace delegates from the United States (incuding me, because I am now a resident there), New Zealand, Netherlands, France, and England played an active and crucial role.

For example, Greenpeace lobbyists persuaded two members of the Whaling Commission to reverse their votes on the pelagic moratorium only seconds after the proposal had been rejected as out of order. The reversal in the votes kept the proposal alive.

None of that effort emanated from Vancouver, but Moore and Greenpeace Vancouver have tried to take much of the credit for the result. Vancouver seems to want the recognition without doing the work.

The larger Greenpeace movement is undoubtedly a tremendous phenomenon, but its headquarters does not reside in Vancouver. Debt-ridden, without any larger sense of purpose or strategy, and alienated from much of the Canadian public, Greenpeace Vancouver is now trying to climb out of self-imposed imprisonment by means of the lawsuit.

"We have nothing to lose," Moore recently told me. Indeed, with environmentalists worldwide truly appalled by Vancouver's misguided actions, Moore seems to be ensuring that there will be nothing left at all.

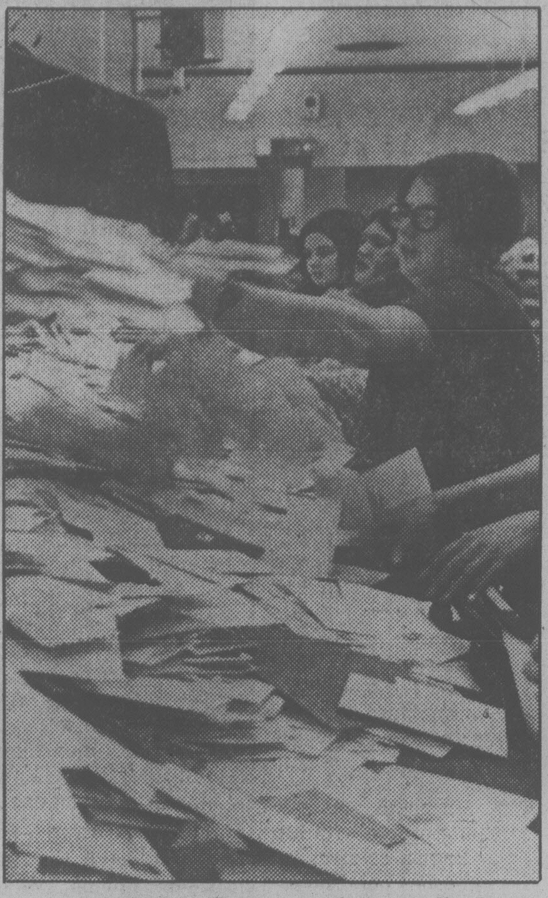
In its own interest, the Vancouver office seems willing to drag down the whole oganization and the future of the whales as well. The momentum at the commission could end whaling next year. But this will depend on the continued success of the work in Europe and of the projects recently being organized in San Francisco. That work is now stalled while the two offices fight each other.

Certainly the international Greenpeace movement needs coordinated organization. But the sort of centralization that Greenpeace Vancouver seeks is just not appropriate to the environmental movement. To control the proceeds of foreign offices would produce irresponsibility at home and demoralization abroad. Cooperation, not authoritarianism, must be the goal.

The Greenpeace story needs a full public airing. If the truth were known, the present leadership in Greenpeace Vancouver would find itself isolated and forgotten. Then perhaps new leadership could be found and, cooperatively with Greenpeace everywhere, it could get on with the job.

'A quagmire of bungling, nepotism, incompetence'

By DOUGLAS FISHER



Post Office work has been depersonalized

OTTAWA — There's surely not another union which has exasperated more Canadians in the past few years than the Canadian Union of Postal Workers. Two leaders in a row, Joe Davidson, and now Jean Claude Parrot, have created little sympathy for the union and its difficulties with the Post Office despite a lot of exposure, especially on TV.

Although my reactions to CUPW have been as critical as those of most others, I have thought for several years that the level of competence in Post Office management must have been abysmal. And, at the back of my mind there's remained a wonderment: how did a once capable work force in a once effective public institution, represented by a once restrained, indeed a most proper, union, go to pot in a decade?

The most satisfying written explanation of what has happened in our Post Office came to my eyes last week. I warn you that the author, Walter Johnson, is a Marxist who believes in "the class struggle." He is very much a self-aware "proletarian." But making allowance for such a bias, Johnson has written a paperback — Trade Unions And The State — which I recommend to anyone trying to understand strikes and lockouts in Canada, and particularly in Quebec. (The publisher is Black Rose Books, Montreal.)

Walter Johnson has been an assembly line worker in a big GM plant in Quebec. He outlines five strike situations in his book, four in Quebec (United Aircraft, Domtar, GM and Quebec Iron) and one (the most vivid chapters) in Ontario, the Toronto Post Office strike of December, 1977.

This last was a "wildcat" at one location; that is, it happened rather spontaneously and improperly. The law was broken but despite its illegal and sudden aspects the strike spread until the official union leadership had to place itself at its head.

Johnson goes back to 1965 to trace the genesis of this wildcat; in doing so he gives a clear outline of how the Post Office of today came to be.

It is notable that in 1965 when the first great "wildcat" came, the Post Office was breaking just about even. However, a surge in the volume of mail in the years just before this first wildcat had convinced management that it must reorganize the work process. It did so, first by breaking all the work routines in the Post Office into parts. One objective was to get lower-paid job classifications lined up for the "donkey" work while having a higher-pay for the sorters, the key workers, workers who had skills, a remarkable esprit de corps and a very high productivity.

To repeat, management under pressure from more mail began to break down the work procedures, beginning to turn what Johnson calls a "white collar," office-type work into another factory-type "line." When these changes didn't work well and productivity per worker began to drop, the management, by this time rich in time-motion experts and authorities on automation, turned to machines. They would automate the process of mail-handling as thoroughly as possible. In doing so they would wipe out almost all distinctions between workers in terms of skill. In other words, the system when complete would be mechanized, depersonalized, and, in theory at least, the human work force would move at the speed of the machinery.

Johnson gives graphic descriptions of how workers reacted to both the simplification of their jobs and the automatic operations. They took unofficial breaks of 10 to 15 minutes in every hour; they kept refusing to meet quotas; when machines broke down or slowed down no one would call a mechanic; diverse methods were developed for embroiling supervisory personnel in arguments; again and again workers would refuse to work overtime; the idea of both "sickoffs" and sitdowns were tried and became stock practices in the guerrilla strife against management in the big, automatied post offices. Johnson notes how so much of the millitancy and tactics came out of the big Montreal local, and how much of it in the early stages in the development of an intransigent attitude among postal workers was designed to embarrass and "show up" cautious or cowardly union leaders.

While the workers and their leaders have made much of their fear of "technological change" and the threat to their job security, what they've been more intent upon is job rotation — i.e., every worker through a shift doing some of each task, a never-ending musical chairs.

Johnson argues directly that the automation program in the Post Office has failed. Even more serious, the established union leadership finds it harder and harder to maintain control of its membership. (That's right: Jean Claude Parrot is more victim than leader). Johnson is succinct on the management: "The administration of the Post Office is a quagmire of nepotism, bureaucratic bungling and gross incompetence." His analysis makes the goal being sought by CUPW, i.e., the Post Office as a Crown Corporation, seem an alternative worth trying. He thinks the workers and the union have "reached the end of the line" on wage issues. That is, they'll get no more big settlements, wildcat as they will. He believes what the workers should do is come up with their own plan on how the Post Office should be run to do an effective job for the public and to give them the work conditions they would like. This sounds most unlikely but no more frightening than the current situation.

Uppers and Downers

By GEOFFREY WHEATCROFT

(Wheatcroft is literary editor and columnist of The Spectator of London, and wrote this for The Observer)

LONDON — Ordering a chaste half-bottle of Bollinger, I took a first sip and began to read the Royal College of Psychiatrists' Report on "Alcohol and Alcoholism."

A hunch told me that it might be depressing reading. So it proved. The report, to quote its smug self-description, is "in the best tradition of the public health movement in this country" — which means that it favors medicalization (of non-medical problems), bureaucratization, legislation, interference. In questions like this, the shrinks observe, governments are "prone to invoke the freedom of the individual." To judge from the tone, that's something which the Royal College would rather governments didn't do. Oh dear.

I turn to the evening paper, hoping to be cheered up. But no. A London drug-dealer has been imprisoned; in Pakistan an English drug-smuggler is to be flogged. Oh dear, again — but a different oh dear. We deplore the punishment dished out to drug-smugglers and illicit distillers in the Middle East. But at least Islamic society is open and honest in its attitudes to drugs of all kinds. Are we?

The more my champenois ruminations proceed, the more confused and hypocritical appear the attitudes of our post-liberal society towards drugs, that is, "non-normal nutrients," to borrow a useful phrase from the race-course vets. Almost everyone today takes drugs. Some take heroin and cocaine in order to cope. Many of us take wine and whisky in order to relax. Innumerable depressed housewives take benzodiazepines — Valium and Librium — in order not to scream or hit their children.

Now, the curious relationship between these different habits is financial; more precisely fiscal. My drug habits — perhaps yours — are nicotine and alcohol (and caffeine, but that is a rather different case). The state doesn't outlaw these habits, though it reprobates them in a nannyish way.

More to the point, it taxes them ferociously. What goes into the Treasury at one end comes out at the other, and it's perfectly fair to say that my whisky money is spent on (among countless other things) the persecution of another group of drug users, whom society has chosen as baddies; and on the subsidization of another group yet. People who want to use cannabis or cocaine are hounded by the Drug Squad. Meanwhile, another far larger slice of my money goes to the Health Service, which means that it is largely spent on sedating the populace.

Does that sound provocative or perverse? Stop and ask yourself, which is the more alarming: The rise in British consumption of spirits between 1961 and 1975 by 95 per cent (which so shocks the Royal College); or the rise, over the same period, of annual prescriptions for mood-altering drugs — tranquillizers and sedatives — by 230 per cent. from 6.2 million to 20.5 million? Every day the British collect more than a million (subsidized) prescriptions; 60,000 of them are for mother's little helpers; one person in six takes tranquillizers. Is this the "best tradition of the public health movement in this country"? I fear that it may be.

I don't say that the use of uppers and downers is always malign, nor of course that heroin and cocaine are benign — how could one, knowing the disasters they sometimes cause? I merely suggest that we should look at the question rationally. All drugs are poisons; some are 'poisons that heal,' in the old medical saying. Aspirin gets rid of a cold (as gin gets rid of unhappiness, briefly). Heroin, alcohol and benzodiazepines are all narcotics (f. Gr. narkoun, to benumb). It is arbitrary and absurd to medicalize them one way or the other, to say that alcohol is a disease, Valium a cure.

My own ultra-libertarian dream is not a popular one: there would be places called "drug shops" where people could buy brandy or cocaine or penicillin as they wished; the one qualification, essential I think to any libertarian argument, is that the shoppers should be adults, not minors. If that seems farfetched (and it does), mightn't we at least look at the drug problem — all drugs — as a double struggle? There is the struggle of individual men and women to look after themselves, to control their consumption of stimulants, and to make sure that they know just what "medicines" they are being given.

And there is the common struggle against the nannies and collectivizers who want to control us because they don't believe we can control ourselves. Returning to the Royal College's Report and reading, with my last glass of wine, of the need for "legislative action to reduce the consumption of alcohol," I can think of a good place for that struggle to begin.

Average wage up

Statistics Canada said the average weekly wage for all industries increased by 1.2 per cent from the May figure of 286.12.

The federal agency's figures showed forestry workers made an average of $345.01 a week, miners $413.44, constructvon workers $430.29, factory workers $310.86 and employees in the service industries $194.14.

Weekly wages varied across the country from a high of $383.86 in the Yukon to a low of $210.81 in Prince Edward Island.

The average hourly wage was $7.44 in manufacturing, $10.86 in construction and $9.53 in mining.

Average weekly hours were 38.8 in manufacturing, 40.8 in construction and 41.4 in mining.

Bonds

Energy spurs urge to merge

MONTREAL (CP) — High energy costs are forcing container companies to "rationalize" business on the North Atlantic, says Thomas Lord, president of CAST North America Ltd.

In a recent interview, Lord said several container services have already gone out of business recently and one way to survive is to amalgamate with other companies.

CAST's parent company, Euro-Canadian, was thwarted in its efforts to take over the United Kingdom shipping group of Furness Withy when an ally in the attempt failed to gain a seat on the Furness Withy board of directors June 28.

But Lord said conditions are such in the industry that he can see "some sort of amalgamation with Furness Withy in the near future."

Along with its competitors, CAST has been forced to make a surcharge for bunker fuel oil, based on out-of-pocket costs.

When sailing, a 50,000-ton vessel burns about 48 tons of bunker fuel oil a day. The cost of bunker fuel has more than doubled to $160 a ton from $75 since last October, while diesel fuel has jumped to $280 from $135 a ton.

But container transportation is still efficient and lines already based in the Port of Montreal are expected to grow in business volume.

Lord said that in 1978, CAST unloaded 174,000 20-foot, equivalent-unit containers here. The company expects the figure to reach 270,000 this year "and we're predicting close to 500,000 by the end of 1980."

A 20-foot equivalent-unit is an international measure used in the industry referring to the capacity of 20-foot containers as opposed to those of other sizes.

Since CAST decided to return to Montreal two years ago, after moving to Halifax for a few months following a dispute with the Port of Montreal's employer association, others have followed.

Last summer, Atlantic Container Line (Canada) Ltd. moved its operations here from Halifax, while CP Ships moved their container operations from Quebec City.

Labor problems which plagued the port at the beginning of the decade have been eliminated, he said, and "most people using the port are optimistic.

"I don't think there'll be a great surge of new lines coming into Montreal, but we expect a substantial increase in the volume of business by the lines already based here."

Are you entitled to cash bonus payments on your Canada Savings Bonds?

Canada Savings Bonds are a safe and popular investment purchased by close to a million Canadians each year. But how well do you know the facts about your existing CSB holdings?

This fall special interim cash bonus payments come due on six outstanding issues of Canada Savings Bonds. The right to these interim bonuses will be lost if these bonds are cashed before November 1, 1979. References to the cash bonus program, and the amounts payable on each series do not appear anywhere on the actual bond certificates.

Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities has prepared a booklet: Facts About Canada Savings Bonds which lists the CSB series where the cash bonus applies and the amounts payable.

The booklet covers many other considerations such as accrued versus cash reporting of CSB interest, capital gains or interest income and the use of the $1000 tax free allowance on CSB interest income.

Write or call today for your free copy.

Food poison payoff

KYOTO, Japan (Reuter) — A Japanese restaurant is to pay $118,000 compensation to the family of an actor who died after dining in the restaurant, court officials said today.

Mitsugoro Bando, a member of the traditional Kabuki theatre, died three years ago at the age of 68 after eating fugu fish. The cook who prepared the meal was later given a suspended eight-year prison sentence for professional negligence.

The liver and ovaries of the fugu fish, a Japanese delicacy, contain tetrodoxin, a paralysing drug similar to curare.

The court officials said compensation was agreed upon in an out-of-court settlement.

Meanwhile in London today, heavy demand pushed the price of gold to record highs, reaching more than $316 U.S. an ounce in London and $315 in Zurich. The U.S. dollar made gains against major European currencies in both Tokyo and Europe.

In London, where the markets were closed Monday for the Bank Holiday, gold opened at $315.875, its highest opening price ever. Hours later at the morning fixing gold was at $316.20 an ounce, 20 cents above the record price set during trading Last Friday.

A week ago gold was selling for about $299 an ounce on the London and Zurich bullion markets. Gold's price began moving up sharply last Wednesday.

"The gold market is hectic with heavy buying demand from all over," a Zurich dealer said.

TOWN TALK

Those Tweed Curtain chappies appear to be so intent on preserving their Oak Bay uniqueness they're losing touch with their English architectural history.

Redevelopment of the Oak Bay Village will restrict builders to four types of architectural design, no more than two of which can be in the same block on the same side of the street.

The four styles sound good — Elizabethan, Tudor, William and Mary or Georgian.

Let's not forget, however, that Elizabeth was a Tudor. And the William and Mary style is no different from the Elizabethan/Tudor style of dark wood beams surrounded by white walls.

So that leaves two different styles. Georgian is separated by a couple of hundred years from Tudor and emphasizes classical lines such as carved arches and colonades.

So there we have the new Oak Bay Village: two stark black and white Tudor buildings next to two light-colored arched Georgian buildings.

Helpline is the latest lifeline.

B.C. Telephone Co. has started putting decals on about 4,000 coin telephones around the province to tell people what number to call to report incidents of child abuse.

"As a policy, we do not put any type of sticker on our coin telephones," said spokesman Mike Reigh. "However, we are responding to a request from the provincial government to participate in a public awareness program that is of an urgent nature."

Reigh said B.C. Tel has worked closely with the ministry of human resources since the infant stages of the "Helpline" to put the toll-free line into effect.

A Town Talk agent who was there says the Douglas Street entrance to the Empress Hotel was blocked for about an hour when the bleary-eyed bus jockey attempted to steal the bus from the Douglas Street depot.

The culprit clumsily rammed into a concrete abutment separating the parking lot from the driveway and then calmly stepped down from the bus and walked away. Game over.

Witnesses at first thought he was the bus driver and delayed calling police. By the time they twigged to what was going on the intrepid imbiber was long gone.

Is there no holding this Al Howie, who has a penchant for running between Victoria and places like Port Hardy and Prince George raising money for such organizations as the United Appeal and UNICEF?

Al, who was slated to reach Prince George tonight, has set his sights on a big one next year.

He intends to take a pebble from the Arctic Ocean, run the new Dempster Highway and carry on to Vancouver, dipping the pebble in the Pacific Ocean then carrying on across Canada to the Atlantic Ocean.

That's a jaunt of about 6,500 miles or a little more than 10,000 kilometres and will take him four months.

Meanwhile, he's looking for a friend with a camper or truck who will accompany him along the gravel-surface Dempster Highway.

"You'll be reading their names in the media," he told the reporters from TV, radio and the newspapers.

Coincidentally, the city's experimental "beer garden" went into operation at Royal Athletic Park for the first time Saturday night.

Games against the leading Walla Walla Padres Saturday and Sunday drew more than 800 fans, more than double the normal turnouts that Mussels have come to expect. But team and park officials agree that "beer power" had nothing to do with improved attendance.

John Bate, assistant to director Jack Morgan of the Community Recreation Services, said introduction of the beer garden was never advertised.

Consulate seeks 'fair shake'

8 Americans face charges

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Charges are being laid against the skippers of eight American tuna boats arrested in Canadian waters, Fisheries Minister James McGrath said today.

Seven of the vessels were escorted into the Inner Harbor by the fisheries vessel Tanu just before midnight.

The eighth vessel, the Four Cs of San Pedro, was brought in by the fisheries vessel Laurier this morning.

The boats were caught about 60 miles west of Cape Cook.

Dr. Wally Johnson, Canadian fisheries regional director in Vancouver, refused comment on what specific charges will be laid until he consults with other fisheries officials.

But in Ottawa, McGrath made it clear that court action will be taken.

The exact charges would be drawn up after the holds and fishing gear of the eight vessels had been inspected.

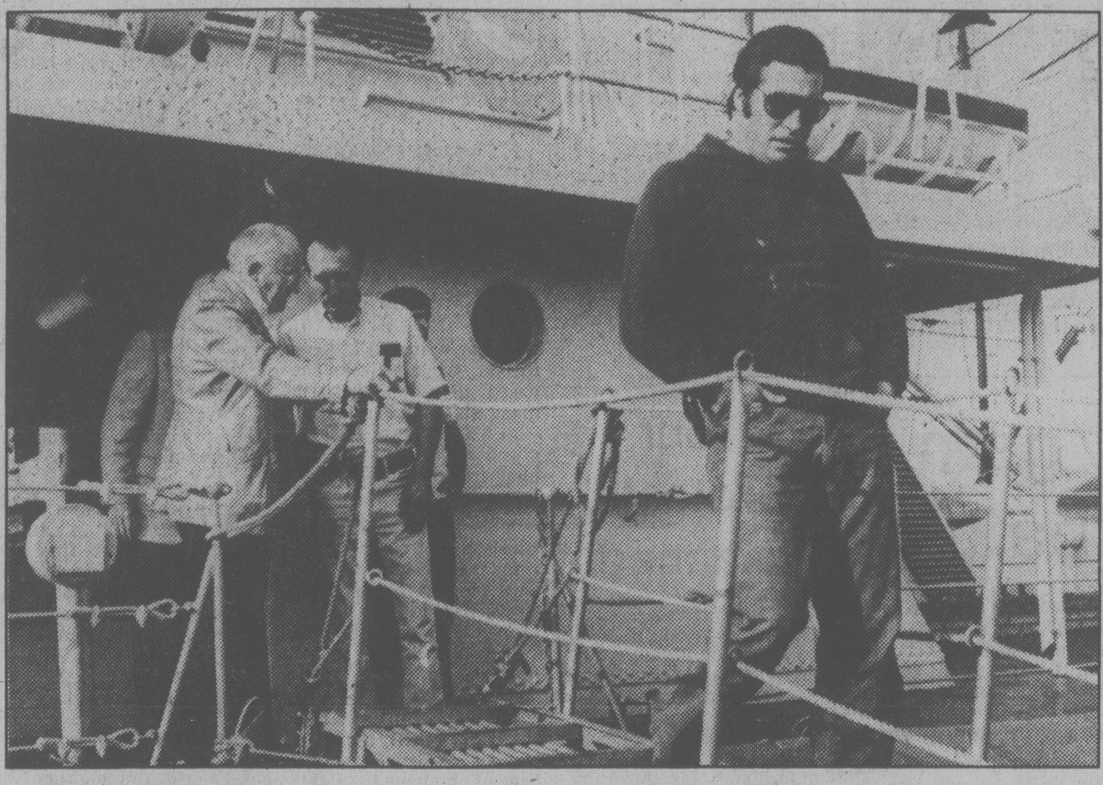
Paul Glasoe of the United States consulate in Vancouver, made it clear however, there are strong political undertones involved.



American skippers leave Coast Guard vessel after undergoing questioning

He said the issue is too complicated and contentious to discuss and told reporters: "Washington D.C. is the place to find the answers."

He said he is in Victoria solely "to make sure everybody gets a fair shake."

Lew Wright, general manager of the Western Fishboat Owners Association, also indicated the seizure will test whether or not the United States recognizes Canada's 200-mile limit.

Wright said the limit should not apply to albacore tuna, because it is a highly migratory fish, spawned in salt water.

He said the eight boats had not set out intentionally to make this a test case but it appears to be rapidly turning into one.

Canadian fisheries officials said five of the vessels had refused to stop until the Tanu put an observer aboard each one.

Wright said however, relations had been co-operative, not hostile.

He said the main thing is to have bonds posted so that the vessels can carry on fishing.

Wright said he had been told officially this morning that the skippers were to be charged with being in Canadian waters illegally.

Depending on the exact wording of the charges, the skippers could face fines, seizure of cargoes, impounding of their vessels and in some cases, jail terms.

Wright said that fishing vessels of any nation can fish for tuna outside a three-mile limit in American waters.

He said tuna follow regular migratory patterns and admitted there could well be other American boats fishing for tuna off the Canadian coast. He said he did not know how many.

In Ottawa, McGrath said the rights of west coast fishermen will be protected.

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said today the seizure emphasises the need for a much larger coast guard if Canada is serious about protecting its sovereignty.

He said the seizure is an indication of what is to come. adding that Canada has the longest coastline in the world and the smallest coast guard.

Hanson said it is important that Canada have a recognizable presence to patrol the 200-mile limit.

The NDP MLA also said it is important that an adequate program be developed to protect and enhance our fish stocks.

In Victoria provincial court today, a Port Townsend fisherman was fined $750 and ordered to forfeit a $254.85 catch after being charged with fishing illegally in Canadian waters.

The court was told fisheries officers saw Leo Linehan, 42, almost two kilometeres inside Canadian waters near Port Renfrew.

Wallace may run for mayor

Wallace, 50, retired from active politics in 1977 to resume a full-time medical practice after resigning as Tory leader.

Wallace, who once served as an Oak Bay alderman, said today he is investigating the time demands and if they look too heavy, he will not be a candidate.

"Much as I enjoy medicine I appreciate having some other challenge in life," Wallace said.

Wallace said the response so far from people who have talked to him about the mayor's job seems favorable.

"It's something I'd like to do, but I don't know whether I can combine the demands of both jobs. If I don't think I can, I'll scrap the idea."

Political ploy suspected in newest design panel

An advisory design panel approved by Saanich council Monday could be little more than a political ploy, Royal Oak Community Association president Graham Hunter said today.

Hunter is one of the six members nominated by the association to sit on the panel which will make recommendations on applications for development permits in the Royal Oak industrial park.

Other members are: assistant municipal planner Allan Hopper, Peter Arn, Margaret Kinsley, Robert Richards and Arthur Kool. The seventh member will be appointed from the industrial park property owners.

Hunter said his association is still doing everything possible to have the industrial park scrapped.

But he said he favors the community-based panel, even if it's only an attempt to enhance the industrial park project, now waiting highways ministry approval.

"In theory it gives us some measure of protection. In reality it may give us none," Hunter said.

Creating the advisory panel in the first place was the community association's idea, even though Mayor Mel Couvelier gives the impression that he thought of it first, he said.

Saanich already has an advisory design panel and an advisory planning commission.

Hunter said he doesn't know how the new panel will fit in with the existing ones.

The executive will request a meeting soon with Highways Minister Alex Fraser to discuss various concerns, including traffic problems it is feared the park will create.

Saanich's failure to design an adequate traffic system is grounds for highways to reject the proposal, Hunter maintains.

He hopes the meeting will be held before Fraser passes judgment on the project.

Curtis has said he will convey his disapproval to both highways and municipal affairs ministries.

Saanich needs approval from both ministries before it can pass bylaws creating the industrial zone.

Mayor Couvelier said last week any delays will be attributed to political interference. Saanich expects approval by Sept. 10.

Hunter said the ratepayers want to know how council plans to accommodate an increase in heavy traffic to and from the proposed industrial area.

Saanich has rejected Fraser's suggestions for new routes to handle the traffic, Hunter said.

Council on May 30 turned down proposals to widen Glanford to four lanes and to build a road linking the Pat Bay Highway and Wilkinson Road.

Council is divided over the industrial park proposal, which has caused disruption and bitterness and on that basis alone it should be scrapped, Hunter said.

Growing residential development in the area is anther ratepayer objection to the park.

There has been no evidence to indicate the project is economically necessary or viable, Hunter said.

Q. How big is Vancouver Island? S.D.

A. It has an area of 12,408 square miles. Its length from northwest to southeast is 285 miles and its maximum width 65 miles.

Two boys injured

Two juveniles were injured when a stolen car being chased by Saanich police crashed into a telephone pole on Alderman Street in Esquimalt early today.

The boys, aged 13 and 15, are in hospital, one with a possible broken leg and the other with head injuries. Both are in good condition.

A 16-year-old boy police said was driving the car was uninjured in the 2 a.m. accident.

He was charged with car theft and later released to his parents pending an appearance in family court.

The Rocks are in!

Mann Cup final to open here Tuesday

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

It was the way it should have been.

Goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer of Victoria Shamrocks, with the Western Lacrosse Association trophy tightly in his grasp, led the victory lap around Memorial Arena Monday night.

Moments earlier Shamrock captain Larry Bell probably said it best for all the Shamrocks:

"We got this far last year and didn't come through. This year we will," he promised when accepting the trophy from WLA commissioner Wally Donaldson.

That was the sequel to the end of the 1979 WLA season and the beginning of the 1979 Mann Cup story.

For it was Smeltzer who did it best of all the Shamrocks as they won their way into their second straight national final with an 8-3 victory over Coquitlam Adanacs to take the final series four games to one.

He blanked the Adanacs in the first and third periods and stopped 54 shots, 20 in each of the final two periods.

The Rocks led 5-0 after one and 6-3 after two, their only weakness showing late in the second period when Coquitlam scored two goals, two minutes and six seconds apart.

Veteran Chris Hall scored the only two goals of the third period to provide any cushion the WLA champions might have needed. Hall's first goal was the 400th point of his WLA career and came into an unguarded net when Dave Thomson checked the ball loose from Adanac goalkeeper Greg Thomas behind the Coquitlam goal.

Dave Durante, Randy Delmonico and Gord Quilty scored for Coquitlam.

For freshman coach Bill Munroe of the Shamrocks victory was particularly sweet. He had taken over at the start of the year from Nirmal Dillon, who had led the Shamrocks into last year's final and, although he didn't say it, it was obvious he felt he had something to prove.

However, he was modest in his moment of victory.

"Our defence was the key," he said. "I was pleased with the result. And the only change I might have made is that perhaps we should have gone more on attack in the third period."

For the Shamrocks, it will be their fifth time in the Mann Cup final. They won it twice. They defeated Peterborough in 1955 and Long Branch in 1957. Both series were in Victoria.

They have lost twice, both times in Peterborough, in 1954 and last year.

Fittingly perhaps, Peterborough Red Oaks, who defeated the Rocks 4-3 in last year's final, likely will be the Ontario Lacrosse Association reps again this time around.

The best-of-seven series begins Tuesday night.

Other games are scheduled Sept. 5, 7 and 8 and 10, 11 and 12, if necessary.

There will be no change in admission prices for the cup final.

The Adanacs' strategy early and throughout the final game was an attempt to nullify the usually potent scoring efforts of Shamrocks' Kevin Alexander with some heavy-handed checking.

With the Shamrocks leading 1-0 on a goal by Lynch and Dan Wilson in the penalty box, Frank Nielsen got charged for needlessly slashing Alexander on the resultant power play. Quickly the Rocks took advantage of the two-man edge and scored through Green with Alexander getting an assist. Minutes later, when Alexander was being double teamed he fed off to the veteran Thompson for the Shamrocks' fourth goal; and, to make it hurt more, he then scored a shorthanded goal, the prettiest goal of the night, to give the Irish their 5-0 first period lead.

Alexander finished the two playoff series with 34 goals, one less than the modern-day record of 35 held by Wayne Goss of New Westminster Salmonbellies. He also recorded seven hat tricks which eqaualled the modern record held by four players.

It is not yet certain how many (if any) players the Shamrocks will be allowed to pick up for the Cup final.

However, it is certain that their first choice will be Doug Hayes of Vancouver Burrards.

"We would like to have that big, strong guy," said Munroe. "Otherwise, we will wait and see what the decision on additional players is."

It is believed that two of several other players being considered are Goss and Wilson of Coquitlam. Wilson was a pickup by Munroe when the Shamrock mentor coached Victoria McDonalds to the Minto Cup championship in 1976.

The eastern series resumes tonight.

SHAMROCKS Kevin Alexander goes in alone on Coquitlam goalkeeper Greg Thomas in Western Lacrosse Association playoff game at Memorial Arena Monday night. Thomas stopped Alexander on this play but Alexander scored one goal amd had two assists as Rocks defeated Adanacs 8-3 to qualify for Mann Cup final. (See story).

Northwest title hopes alive

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Victoria Mussels are still in the running in the three-team scramble for a berth in this weekend's Northwest League championship baseball playoff but they can't afford to lose another game.

The Mussels moved within one game of the Walla Walla Padres Monday night at Royal Athletic Park when righthander Doug Mathey weathered a four-run storm in the third inning and went the distance for a 9-5 victory over the northern division leaders.

The win moved the Mussels within one game of the Padres with three games left in the schedule for both teams.

Mussels play Grays Harbor Mets at Athletic Park in a three-game set starting tonight at 7:30 while the Padres begin a similar series in Bellingham against the Mariners.

Bellingham remained in a second-place tie with the Mussels Monday night by bouncing the Mets 10-7, thus keeping alive their chances of winning the division.

Victoria's win Monday completed a three-game sweep over Walla Walla but the Padres still hold the trump cards. Besides that one-game lead, they have played two games less than Victoria and Bellingham because of rainouts earlier in the season against Grays Harbor and Bend.

The league has ruled there will be no makeup games, so if the Padres finish tied with the Mussels or Mariners in the games-behind column, Walla Walla will finish first because of a better won-lost percentage.

That means the Padres can clinch it by winning two from Bellingham, even if Mussels take all their remaining games.

On the other hand, Victoria can finish a clear-cut winner by sweeping three while Walla Walla loses twice. That would leave the Mussels with a 42-30 record followed by the Padres at 40-30 and Bellingham at 41-31.

Two Victoria victories won't be enough. That would leave the Mussels at 41-31 and the only way they could then pass Walla Walla would be if the Padres lost three and finished with a 39-31 mark. But in that case, Bellingham would finish at 42-30 and win the division.

There is another possibility — Victoria and Bellingham both winning three and finishing in a first-place tie. Results against each other would be no help in this case because they are 8-8 in their season series.

Incredibly, the custom in such cases has been to toss a coin to decide the division winner but Mussel owner Jim Chapman said Monday he would try to arrange a sudden-death playoff with Bellingham this Friday.

The winner would then open a best-of-three championship series at home against the southern division winning Bend Phillies on Saturday with the second and third games at Bend Sunday and, if necessary, Labor Day Monday.

One further possibility remains, horrible as it may be. What about rainouts here or in Bellingham?

Don't even ask.

Mathey was brilliant after his third-inning shock Monday. He got the last three batters of the inning in succession, then retired the side in order in the fourth, sixth, seventh and eighth. He yielded a leadoff single in the fifth to Greg Thys, but erased him on a double play.

The only damage after that came in the ninth when Walla Walla counted once on a leadoff triple by Aaron Cain followed by Tom Jones' double.

Mathey ended up yielding seven hits, walking two and striking out five.

His mates clinched it with a four-run outburst in the fifth, sparked by Doug Morganti's leadoff homer (his sixth of the season), Pete Rabassa's single, Tom Dorsey's double, a two-run triple by Jim Burton and another run-scoring double by Dan Purpura.

Playoff fever strikes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Playoff fever gripped this West Coast city Monday as thousands of professional soccer fans lined up for blocks in the downtown area to buy tickets for Wednesday's game between Vancouver Whitecaps and New York Cosmos.

Both teams advanced to the national conference final during the weekend with stirring victories in the confusing North American Soccer League playoffs.

The Whitecaps defeated Los Angeles Aztecs 1-0 in a regulation game and 1-0 in a 30-minute mini-game here Saturday, while in New York the Cosmos performed similar surgery on Tulsa Roughnecks by 3-0 and 3-1 scores Sunday.

And the teams seem to have scores to settle, assuring a sellout at the 32,000-seat Empire Stadium.

Vancouver defeated the storied Cosmos 4-1 and 4-2 in regular-season games this year, with the second match in New York marred by a lengthy brawl.

Lions, Stamps doing battle for first place

Times News Services

Both conference leads could change hands tonight during two of three Canadian Football League battles.

British Columbia Lions, atop the Western Conference, face Calgary Stampeders, who are tied for second place with Edmonton Eskimos, one point behind Leos.

In another game, Toronto Argonauts visit defending Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos in a nationally televised game (CBC at 6:30 p.m. PDT) with potential for a classic confrontation — an excellent pass offence against an excellent pass defence.

Argos will be trying to take over at least temporary possession of first place in the Eastern Conference. They are currently tied for first in the EFC with Montreal Alouettes, who play second-place Ottawa Rough Riders on Wednesday.

In the other CFL game tonight, winless Saskatchewan Roughriders visit Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

"John's the kind of guy who's going to show you right away whether he has a hot hand," said Gotta, who will be trying to turn his club around from an embarrassing 6-5 win last week over Saskatchewan.

"Maybe I can go out and regain some respect," was Hufnagel's reaction. "I thought I had my best preseason since I've been playing here, but I just haven't played."

Another change will see Willie Burden return to the tailback slot and probably handle the majority of the running.

Lions coach Vic Rapp will be looking for a better performance from his defensive squad.

"We have to play better defensively than we did against Hamilton," said Rapp, in reference to last week's 22-16 victory over the Tiger-Cats.

The lone regular-season loss B.C. sustained came at the hand of the Stampeders and the Lions also dropped an exhibition game to Calgary.

Rapp noted Calgary had offensive problems in the Stampeders' win over Saskatchewan last week.

"But you never know when they're going to snap out of it," he said.

Linebacker Paul Giroday, coming off a torn calf muscle in training camp, will be making his first appearance of the season in place of defensive back Hal Lund, who suffered a shoulder injuy against Hamilton.

Whalers give up on Hull

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Hartford Whalers of the National Hockey League said today that they have given up hope of obtaining the rights to hockey great Bobby Hull.

Jack Kelley, director of hockey operations, said it has become apparent that the Whalers are no longer interested in pursuing a possibility of Hull playing for the NHL expansion team this coming season.

"From our conversations on Sunday night, it is apparent that if Bobby comes out of retirement he will in all probability play with the Black Hawks," Kelley said.

J.R.'s pitching 'gem' blinds Montreal batters

By Associated Press

It's tough seeing the ball with J. R. Richard seemingly in your face.

"He's so darn big, it seems like he looking down your throat," said Montreal manager Dick Williams after the 6-foot-8 right-hander hurled Houston Astros to a 3-0 victory over the Expos with a sizzling, 12-strikeout, two-hit performance Monday night.

"He sure pitched a gem," said Williams, "If it wasn't for the walks (six), that was the only way we had a shot at him."

Double-figure performances in strikeouts have become commonplace for the hard-throwing pitcher. The 12 strikeouts gave him a major league-leading total of 244 so far this year.

"He's the master," said clubmate Enos Cabell, whose sixth-inning single drove in two runs to provide Richard with more than enough support. "He said in the dugout that he was getting tired — but he sure didn't show it."

Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati Reds whipped Philadelphia Phillies 4-2, San Diego Padres defeated Chicago Cubs 5-4 in 10 innings, Los Angeles Angels doubled Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 and Atlanta Braves defeated New York Mets 5-1 after losing a 2-1 decision in the completion of a suspended game from June 17.

In the American League, Baltimore manager Earl Weaver liked what he saw of the Orioles' ace Jim Palmer — on the mound. And Palmer liked his view of Weaver even better — in the stands.

The feisty Weaver began serving a three-game suspension Monday night while the sore-armed Palmer recorded his first victory since June 27, a 5-1 triumph over Minnesota Twins.

"He's a lot easier to ignore when he's 20 rows behind the screen instead of in the dugout," said Palmer, 8-4, who has had a number of differences of opinion with Weaver over the art of pitching.

Palmer's triumph gave the Orioles a split of a twi-night double-header — the Twins took the opener 4-3 — and gave them with their biggest lead of the season, seven games ahead of both Boston Red Sox and Milwaukee Brewers in the East Division.

In other AL games, the Red Sox edged Chicago White Sox 4-3, Kansas City Royals edged Brewers 10-9 in 10 innings, Detroit Tigers downed California Angels 3-2, Toronto Blue Jays whipped Oakland A's 7-0, New York Yankees downed Texas Rangers 7-4 and Seattle Mariners nipped Cleveland Indians 6-5 in 12 innings.

Tour protests planned

LONDON (Reuter) — British anti-apartheid campaigners will organize demonstrations at the South African Rugby Union team's matches if a tour by the South Africans in October is allowed to go ahead, a spokesman for the movement said today.

Mike Terry added: "If the rugby authorities want a winter like 1969 — when the Springbok team last toured Britain — then this is what they will get."

Virtually every match on the 1969-70 tour was disrupted by anti-apartheid demonstrations.

The tour planned for October was announced Monday by the committee of the four home unions — England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. Two matches in each of the four countries are scheduled for the multi-racial South African Barbarians team which the committee has invited to tour.

Higueras captures pro title

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Jose Higueras of Spain, upset by a service break in the fourth game, ca back in mighty fashion and won the 52nd United States tennis championship Monday night with a 6-3, 6-1 victo over Hans Gildemeister of Chile.

After being broken and falling behind 3-1, the 26-yea Higueras took command and grudgingly surrendered only more points to Gildemeister the rest of the way.

Athletes relax: Tories promise 300 per cent

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Paproski, federal minister of fitness and amateur sport, promised Saturday that Canadian amateur athletes will receive "300 per cent more" financial assistance than they got under the previous Liberal government.

Paproski did not specify where the increased financing is to come from but he said he will be looking for more contributions from the business community and will be "a tough bargainer with the provinces and with my fellow cabinet ministers on behalf of Canada's amateur athletes."

He made his comments Saturday at the Canadian National Exhibition Sports Day luncheon.

Paproski accused the former government of failing to take positive action in assisting amateur athletes. "I do not say that with any malice to any of my colleagues I'm replacing," he said. "They tried. But they had a bunch of bureaucrats there who were just not aware of what sports is all about.

"Now they've got a minister who is not going to be baffled by all that . . . bureacratic structure."

The former pro football player with Edmonton Eskimos said he plans to seek changes in tax laws that will encourage businessmen to contribute to athletics.

"Why can a businessman write off advertising expenditures and not be able to write off his contributions to improving our national athletic performances?" Paproski asked "After all, for Canada as a country, are there many other forms of advertising that pay bigger dividends internationally than the goodwill achieved in sporting competitions?"

He was critical of the lack of a scholarship system in Canadian universities which encourages many top Canadian athletes to move to the United States.

Paproski said that following the 1980 Olympic Games, he would be calling upon "all of the various sporting fraternities" to gather for a sports congress to discuss objectives for amateur sports. A similar sports congress was proposed in a policy paper by Paproski's predecessor, Iona Campagnollo, three months ago.

Amateur sports has received more than $8 million from Loto Canada since it was launched in 1976. Paproski said that the deal now under negotiation which will see the provinces control Loto funds will require the provinces to continue support for amateur sport.

Beard a 'possible' for visit to Meadows

Veteran tour professional Frank Beard and the three Canadians enjoying good success on the PGA tournament trail this year are among the prominent "name" players that may turn up at Glen Meadows next month.

Beard, Jim Nelford, Dan Halldorson and Dave Barr are being wooed, and chances of their appearance in the British Columbia Open Sept. 26-29 are "pretty good."

Some loose ends remain, but most of the big ones have been tied to guarantee a first-class tournament. Sponsorship was one of the last hurdles cleared, and that came about when Park Pacific Investments (Chateau Victoria, Harbor Towers, etc.) agree to provide financial backing.

Some of the finer details were to be announced at a media conference this afternoon.

One problem not settled, says Glen Meadows pro and tournament chairman Bill Penny, is the matter of caddies. Since most youngsters will be back in school, Penny's committee is desperately seeking the services of adults interested in caddying.

* * *

Bob Beauchemin, the lefthander who doesn't like talking about how he has fared financially as a touring pro, continues to impress with his progress. Considerable consistency, poise and maturity showed at the weekend when "Beau" won the annual CFAX-Metro Honda Open at Cedar Hill.

And Jim Rutledge's tie-for-second finish on his 20th birthday added another notch to his impressive streak in tournament play this year. Rutledge has been in the money in all eight tournaments he has entered.

He won the Eaglecrest Pro-Am near Qualicum last Friday for his fourth victory. Cowichan, the Labatt's Cedar Hill Open and the Kamloops Open were Rutledge's earlier conquests. He has finished second three times and was third in the other tournament played.

Pro Earl Davies, Dave Donaldson, Al Shumka and Gil Wong earned a trip to Winnipeg by topping all B.C. teams. With Davies scoring a 74 and Donaldson a 72, the team picked up 149 points figured under a unique system to beat out Wayne Vollmer's Prince George team by eight points.

Vollmer was the low pro with a 66 but Davies still managed to pick up $1,050 for his team's success.

Proceeds from the event go to the Children's Hospital and to junior golf development but the BCGA, repeating a gesture it made last year, voted its share of more than $10,000 to the charity.

* * *

BRIEFLY: Beauchemin, Rutledge and Morgan all are entered in the CPGA event at Woodridge this week and the $100,000 tournament will be televised by the CBC network Saturday (starting at noon) and Sunday (11 a.m.) . . . The 1980 CPGA has been awarded to Edmonton Mayfair . . . Ed Hathaway birdied the second extra hole to defeat Chris Jenkins in a playoff for the Victoria Club junior championship at the weekend . . . Hole-in-one scorers in recent days included Lyle Barnes, on the second at Cedar Hill; George Maycock, on Oak Bay's 13th, and Lloyd Baker, on the ninth at the Mt. Douglas par-three course . . . The latter's success simply proved what Bill Halkett has been saying all along: that Baker is a far better golfer than a cribbage player.

Cables take title

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies carried the play Monday night, but goaltender Rod Banister had their number to carry Burnaby Cablevision to an 11-6 win which gives them the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League championship, 4-1.

Burnaby, the defending Canadian junior lacrosse champions, now heads to Calgary for a round-robin series against the Ontario champions and an Alberta all-star team for this year's Minto Cup. That series starts Sept. 2.

Banister made 51 saves Monday as the Salmonbellies outshot Burnaby, 57-41. John Purdon, Paul Dal Monte and Loyd Simons each scored twice for the winners.

Barr best of champions

Barr finished with a 5-1 record. Kay Drozdowski of Victoria West and Joan Turner of Canadian Pacific tied for second at 4-2.

Vi Lecras of Gordon Head was 3-3, Hazel Janes of Victoria and Marge Jones of Nanaimo 2-4 and Evelyn Leahey of Oak Bay 1-5.

Anne Hammond of Victoria was 5-1, Edna Messum of Burnside and Florence Reiter of CP 4-2, and Julie Brakefield-Moore, Gordon Head, Phylis McElroy, Lakehill, and Irene Carruthers, Oak Bay, 1-5.

B.C. captures title

MILVERTON, Ont. (CP) — Diane Materi tossed a one-hitter Sunday as British Columbia (Vancouver Doc's Blues) defeated the host Milverton Suns 4-0 to capture the Canadian senior women's softball title.

Materi got the only offensive support she needed in the fifth when Tracy Huckluck scored from third with the game's first run on a fielder's choice.

Maureen Lehner singled home two runs in the sixth off losing pitcher Luanne Izzard, who had thrown a pair of no-hitters — one a perfect game — earlier in the competition. Diane Nelson scored the final B.C. run in the seventh. Alberta finished third.

Yankees sign Scott

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — New York Yankees have signed first baseman George Scott, 10 days after the 35-year-old veteran was released by Kansas City Royals. To make room for Scott, the Yankees optioned outfielder Bobby Brown to Columbus of the International League.

Garo cut

By The Associated Press

While only a handful of Miami Dolphins fans might remember Karl Kremser, it will be difficult for any National Football League follower to forget the man who replaced him — Garabed Sarkis Yepremian.

Nor could anyone forget the kicking exploits of the 35-year-old Cypriot, better known as Garo, who was cut Monday by Miami coach Don Shula in favor of 22-year-old rookie Uwe von Schamann.

It was a day of difficult decision-making for NFL coaches as rosters were cut to the 45-man limit in preparation for next weekend's opening games. But it was extremely trying for Shula, who earlier had tried to deal Yepremian, a favorite of the Orange Bowl faithful for nine years.

"This had to be my toughest morning (in 17 years) as an NFL coach," Shula said. "The toughest decision was the placekickers. To tell a guy you can't use him after he contributed so much is very tough. We're getting a younger guy with a stronger leg."

The Dolphins also traded fullback Leroy Harris to Philadelphia Eagles and waived three rookies, linebacker Joel Williams and wide receivers Jeff Groth and Lloyd Henry. Harris was beaten out of his job by 32-year-old Larry Csonka, who was signed as a free-agent after being released by New York Giants.

Other familiar running backs deleted from NFL rosters Monday included running backs Booby Clark of Cincinnati Bengals, Art Best of Chicago Bears and James McAlister of New England Patriots.

Meanwhile, the league gave the San Francisco 49ers permission to temporarily take O. J. Simpson off their active roster. Simpson, second-leading rusher in NFL history, has been in Los Angeles since an Aug. 18 swimming-pool accident involving his youngest daughter, Aaren. The girl died Sunday night.

Joe Hudon closed the gap on leading-driver Keith Linton during Monday's harness-racing card at Sandown Raceway.

Hudon started from the rail in three of his six starts and collected four victories to move his Universal Driving rating percentage to .403.

Linton, meanwhile, was winless in five drives, finishing second once and third twice to drop his percentage to .408.

The leader did finish second another time — with Lady Fort in the fourth race — but a protest that he interfered with Nechako Chris just after the start was upheld and Lady Fort was bumped back to seventh spot.

Hudon scored from the No. 1 slot with Holridge Bob in the fifth race, Bold Design in the seventh and Alemite Quill in the eighth.

He started the evening by winning the first race with hard-to-handle Shoot The Works, which had been in trouble by breaking stride all season.

The largest Exactor return of the evening came in the fourth race when Ceejay Hathy collected its second victory in 26 starts at Sandown and combined with Milt Rodney to pay $254.30.

Hot Hitter sets world mark

MONTREAL (CP) — Herve Filion of Angers, Que., drove Hot Hitter to a world mark of one minute, 54 seconds over the mile Sunday to win the $181,150 Prix d'Ete, Canada's richest harness race, at Blue Bonnets Raceway.

Hot Hitter surpassed the previous record of 1:54 3-5 set on a five-eighths-mile track in the 1977 race by Governor Skipper.

Junior draftees sign with Vancouver Canucks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teen-age forwards Brent Ashton and Arthur Rutland have signed multi-year agreements with Vancouver Canucks, the National Hockey League team announced Monday.

They were selected by Vancouver in the NHL's recent entry draft, which included numerous players with one year of major junior eligiblity remaining. Both are 19 years of age.

Ashton, a 209-pound left winger, was taken in the second round from Saskatoon Blades of the Western Hockey League, where he scored 64 goals and had 119 points last season.

Rutland played for Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Hockey Association and had 59 goals and 139 points last season. The centreman was taken in the fourth round.

Germany, Holland in final

VANCOUVER (CP) — West Germany's Christine Moser broke a scoreless tie in the third overtime period to give her club a 1-0 win Monday over a stubborn United States side at the women's world field hockey championship.

The win puts West Germany into Wednesday's final against the Netherlands which got a goal with 1:39 to play in regulation time to beat Australia 1-0.

The 11th-ranked U.S. team which earlier knocked off third-ranked New Zealand hung tough against the West Germans through 70 minutes of regulation time, two 7½-minute overtime periods and into a sudden-death period.

But the bubble burst in the 89th minute when Moser took a shot off a short corner, beating U.S. goaltender Gwen Cheeseman.

Australia and the U.S. play for third and fourth and Wales and England battle for fifth position.

Canada could have been in the same position as England, but lost to the English side 2-1 Monday as Marge Souyave picked up two goals. Sheila Forsey got the only Canadian goal.

In consolation games, Ireland nipped Japan 3-1; Argentina and New Zealand tied 2-2; Wales outscored Scotland 3-1; India got by Trinidad-Tobago 3-1; Fiji defeated Hong Kong 4-1; and Bermuda shutout Zambia 2-0.

Before the judge

Jose and 19-year-old Calvin Lloyd Patterson, no fixed address, are charged with breaking and entering and possession of a stolen guitar.

Jose was denied bail following a hearing and was remanded for election of his trial method.

Patterson pleaded guilty to the break-in and to a charge of theft under $200 in connection with the theft of flags Aug. 19 from the Royal Olympic Hotel.

He was remanded in custody until Friday for sentencing.

Crown counsel Clinton Kittle entered a stay of proceedings, abruptly ending a preliminary hearing into a charge of robbery with violence against five persons just before the alleged victim was to testify.

The charges arose from a June 22 incident in which Mark Leslie Schneider was reportedly beaten and robbed.

A 17-year-old who took part in the theft of a large quantity of copper wiring was given a suspended sentence, six months probation, and 100 hours of community service work.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Ferreira and three juveniles were seen loading 200 pounds of copper wiring, valued at $120, into the rear of a truck at the back of Houle Electric, 625 Hillside, about noon Aug. 13.

Police found the same vehicle later that day at Victoria Iron and Metal, 10 Saghalie. When questioned, Law said, Ferreira initially told police he got the copper from the Prospect Lake Road area but later admitted taking it from the Hillside address.

Judge William Ostler said he had no authority to order an assessment under the Heroin Treatment Act program for John Arthur Heffernan, 1792 Rockland.

Heffernan and two others are charged with a break-in Aug. 4 at the McGill and Orme pharmacy at 1105 Pandora and possession of stolen property. He was denied bail Aug. 8.

Defence lawyer John Hills applied for his client to be assessed by the program's evaluation panel for possible voluntary admittance to facilities at Brannen Lake near Nanaimo.

Ostler said he had checked over the legislation previously and could not find where the courts had authority to order voluntary assessement.

The judge suggested Hills take the matter up with the attorney-general's department and the corrections authorites.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Thomas Lawrence Griffin, 22, of 2231 Arbutus, $350; and Russell Alan Court, 18, of 2822 Colquitz, $200.

Postal picket prod

Victoria's inside postal workers will set up an information picket line at the main post office on Government Street Wednesday in a move designed to prod the federal government into turning the post office into a Crown corporation.

Similar picket lines will be set up at other Western Canada centres.

Peter de Belle, vice-president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said today normal business at the city terminal will not be affected.

He said the inside postal workers want to pressure the Conservative government into stating in the throne speech opening Parliament Oct. 9 that the conversion of the post office to a Crown corporation is a priority item.

The postal workers feel many of the problems in the post office can be blamed on a poor organizational structure.

De Belle said the inside workers also will send letters to their respective members of Parliament stating their position.

The letters will remind the MPs that all three major political parties have agreed in principle with the Crown corporation idea.

Escaper caught

A 44-year-old man who escaped July 15 from the minimum security corrections camp at Snowden near Campbell River is back in custody.

Donald Raymond Gray was arrested by Colwood RCMP late Monday as officers were investigating an attempted break-in at the Warehouse Food Store on Goldstream.

Police said a man spotted with a ladder at the back of the store claimed he was an employee but fled as officers approached.

Mom pleads guilty to abducting child

A 32-year-old Vancouver woman pleaded guilty in county court Monday to abducting her 10-year-old daughter from the father who has a court order giving him custody of the child.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart placed the woman on two years probation with no right of access to the child until B.C. Supreme Court hears that matter and makes any further order regarding custody and access, with the exception of one supervised visit before she goes to the U.S. for several months.

"I hope by now you realize the very serious nature of the offence which you have committed and to which you have pleaded guilty," he told her.

The offence occurred Nov. 13 on one of the Gulf Islands where the father lives, said Crown counsel Robert Mulligan.

The mother, who was granted liberal access under a 1978 Supreme Court order which gave custody of the girl to the father, took the child one weekend and did not return her.

It was not until four months later that the child and mother were found.

He said a psychiatric report found the mother did not suffer any major psychiatric disorder and was not an unfit mother.

Defence counsel David Lisson said the mother has not given up her strong desire to have custody of the child and felt the only way she could prove her fitness was to take the child.

Bridge bill $800,000

Work has started on replacing the controversial Bailey bridges on Seymour and Vernon avenues.

Wheaton Construction of Victoria was awarded the $445,610 contract. With construction of new approaches, the total cost of the project will be $800,000.

Saanich asked for removal of the Bailey bridges because of the limited visibility and confusion where the three-lane routes narrow into two bridges.

Replacing them will be a single bridge at each location. There will be provisions for sidewalks and a pedestrian underpass at each site.

Construction will be completed within six months.

The highway will be kept open to at least two-lane traffic at all times while the work is being carried out.

Seawall now roller freeway

By GAYLE STEWART

VANCOUVER (CP) — The patter of joggers' footsteps on the seawall circling downtown Stanley Park now is being interrupted by the spinning of thousands of tiny wheels.

The 9.6-kilometre seawall, once the peaceful haven of the runner-pedestrian crowd, has become a freeway for hundreds of roller skating enthusiasts.

Out-of-control eight-wheel beginners flounder alongside experts disco-stepping their way through tricky manoeuvres along the open stretches and hairpin turns.

Owners of the six rental shops which have popped up suddenly on the park's doorstep are grinning ear to ear, but some residents are not amused.

So, a five-member roller-patrol, financed by the rental outlets, has been set up to monitor the flow in particularly congested areas.

Armed with whistles and garbed in colorful uniforms featuring pith helmets, the patrol crew attempts to keep the wheel traffic to one side of the seawall, leaving the other for joggers and pedestrians.

"I didn't think people would listen to us but they do," said patrol member Danny Morrison, 22.

"I knew roller skating was going to catch on but I didn't think it would take off so quickly in Vancouver," said Fredrick Burgess, who opened his first rental shop in June. He has opened a second outlet and has plans to sell skates as well.

"We opened with 100 pairs of skates and expanded to 180 and have another 70 we're preparing to go, but the number of skates available from suppliers is too short to meet the need."

The shops charge $2 an hour for a spin on the skates and many skaters stay out for a couple of hours.

Four of the six shops in the Stanley Park area say they average 100 rentals on a weekday and up to 200 a day Saturday and Sundays. The two larger outlets estimate upwards of 250 rentals a day during the week and more than 400 on a weekend day.

The rental shops agree that once their one major expense — the purchase price of the skates — is paid off, the rest is gravy. Several shops reap even more profits through retail sales.

"Our cheapest boot-model costs $80 and they go up from there to more than $200," said Ducommun. "We've got bearings in here that retail for $96.

"You can buy vinyl boot-model skates for $39.95 in department stores, but we decided to go top-quality from the word go," he said.

An array of safety and fashion accessories, in a variety of price ranges, also can be purchased.

The major department stores, always eager to latch onto the latest consumer craze, are promoting the product and experiencing brisk sales.

"We've sold 300 to 400 pairs in our B.C. stores this year, but we could have sold at least 10 times that many if we'd had them in stock," said Dean Urquhart, an Eaton's spokesman.

"Like all stores, we're having major difficulties getting skates from suppliers because no manufacturer is geared up to begin to handle the demand."

The reason for the resurgence of roller skating lies with technological breakthroughs in the roller sport field. The current boon has been credited to the development and refinement of the polyurethane wheel.

Invented in the late 1960s to please skate board fanatics, the urethane wheel revolutionized the industry by providing a smoother, faster ride.

"If the urethane wheel hadn't been invented, skateboarding would never have progressed to the extent it has and it may have just died out as roller skating did earlier," said Ducommun.

"It wasn't until someone thought to apply the wheel to roller skates that the roller skate thing happened."

Rental shop owners say the lion's share of their business comes from the 18-to-35 age group. Most have fond memories of skating as kids.

"I used to head out to the bush to escape from it all," said one skater. "But now, I can just slap on my skates and cruise around the park with the ducks and the geese and the waves lapping at the shore . . . it's like I'm using all this concrete I've tried to escape for so long."

Some rental owners say the market here barely has been tapped. They say things really will start to happen when the indoor roller-disco scene is introduced in the city.

"The disco thing is booming in California and it's going to happen here soon," said Burgess. "It's simply a matter of someone coming along and doing it right."

NAMEGAME No. 5

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

Times are changing for Archie Bunker

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Carroll O'Connor fired up a cigar in his dressing room, pointed to the actor opposite him and said, "That's the new co-star of the show. There's a handful of great actors in the country and he's one of them."

O'Connor and Balsam were taking a breather from the hour-long debut taping of Archie Bunker's Place, the show which carries on for All in The Family as the beloved bigot moves into his 10th year in the top 10.

"This is essentially a new show," O'Connor said. "Marty and I have found a relationship between two men that really works."

Balsam (an Oscar winner) chuckled. "I play Murray Klein, Archie's new partner in his bar. Murray is Jewish, a Democrat and a liberal. Just the opposite of Archie Bunker."

"We're changing the direction of the series," O'Connor added. "It used to be Archie against the world, embodied in his family. Now it will be Archie against the new life that comes into the bar.

When Jean Stapleton announced she'd appear on only four — maybe six — episodes of the new season, O'Connor knew she must be replaced by a strong and clever actor to provide conflict in the series. His first choice was Balsam.

The two men worked together 20 years ago in an NBC production of The Sacco and Vanzetti Story. They became friends and mutual admirers.

Three weeks ago O'Connor telephoned Balsam and proposed he join the show.

"CBS didn't think Marty would accept," O'Connor said. "He lives in New York and does a play every year. They said he wouldn't move to Hollywood. When I asked Marty to be my partner, there was a long silence."

Balsam took up the story. "I always thought TV series were garbage. I didn't want to burn myself out in a situation comedy. But I'd been thinking about a custom-tailored show for myself when Carroll called. That's why the silence.

"Carroll explained the character he had in mind. And I asked, 'How Jewish?' Then I wanted to know if there was anything on paper, a script. There was none but it sounded interesting."

Assured that the role of Murray would not be the cliche comic Jew but a New York guy who happens to be Jewish, Balsam agreed — for a great deal of money.

"Of course, Archie is shocked when he discovers his new partner is Jewish, liberal and a Democrat," O'Connor said. "But the underlying relationship between them must grow to a mutual fondness and respect which will take most of the season to develop.

"Archie will still be married to Edith and Jean (Stapleton) will be back for a half-dozen shows. Little Danielle Brisbois will be back as a regular. So will Bill Quinn as Mr. Van Ransseleer, the blind guy at the bar.

"Janson Wingreen will continue to be Harry, the bartender, who sells out his half-interest to Murray Klein. Alan Melvin, who plays barfly Barney Hefner, is coming back, too.

But the heart of the new show will be the relationship between Murray and Archie."

The actor was induced to carry on the show through an extraordinary pact with CBS. The network has granted O'Connor's company three TV movie opportunities and five series to be produced by O'Connor-Becker in the next three years.

There was a considerable salary boost, of course, but millions could accrue to O'Connor if his company's productions succeed. O'Connor stands to found a TV empire rivaling the one established by Norman Lear.

Renegade lawyer to run ads for $350 divorces

NORTH VANCOUVER (UPC) — Renegade lawyer Donald Jabour plans to start advertising his legal clinic's divorce prices in local newspapers this week even though he risks "almost instant" suspension by the Law Society of British Columbia for doing so.

Jabour said Monday he will place his first newspaper ad Thursday advertising his north shore clinic's $350 all-inclusive price for handling uncontested divorces.

Another ad is to appear in a local weekly this weekend to publicize the clinic's price for handling land title transfers.

If the Law Society, given the power to regulate advertising by the provincial Legal Profession Act, rules Jabour's ads violate its rules, the lawyer could be suspended pending disciplinary proceedings for "conduct unbecoming," Jabour said.

The move is the 44-year-old lawyer's latest in a controversial, year-long battle with the Law Society over the question of whether lawyers should be allowed to advertise their services.

In January, 1978, Jabour placed an ad in a local paper advertising the opening of his new clinic in North Vancouver. The society, which did not allow any type of advertising at that time, found him guilty of "conduct unbecoming" in subsequent disciplinary proceedings and moved to suspend him for six months.

But Jabour wasn't giving up that easily. He sued the society and won his case. B.C. Supreme Court Judge A.A. Mackoff ruled in April that the society did not have the power to stop lawyers from advertising.

The society has appealed that ruling to the B.C. Court of Appeal; no date has been set for the case.

Since the controversy began, the Law Society has changed its rules concerning advertising to allow lawyers to publicize their areas of practice. But advertising legal fees, though accepted in Alberta and Manitoba, is still banned in B.C, said Jabour.

Pipeline over first hurdle

OLYMPIA (AP) — Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co.'s application for permission to build a multi-million oil pipeline was officially accepted Monday by Washington State's Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council.

But that acceptance marked just the beginning of a long and tedious process toward a possible green light for the project.

The pipeline company, based in Vancouver, wants permission to build a 1,360-kilometre line from Low Point, about 18 miles west of Port Angeles on the Strait of Juan de Fuca, to Edmonton.

The project, with a price tag of $200 million in the United States and $325 million on the Canadian side, is in direct competition with a proposal by Northern Tier Pipeline Co., which would use an all-U.S. route to the Midwest.

Two other pipeline projects have also been proposed. One would see a pipeline built along the Alaska Highway through the Yukon and northern British Columbia to Edmonton, while the other calls for an oil port at Kitimat on B.C.'s central coast to connect with a pipeline to Edmonton.

The Canadian government has said it is opposed to the movement of supertankers along Canada's West Coast and has favored the Alaska Highway project.

Trevor Durant, Trans Mountain's manager of administration and planning, said the proposal would involve tankers, up to 200,000 deadweight tons, unloading at two offshore mooring facilities. The crude would be shipped in underwater pipes to an onshore tank farm with a capacity of four million barrels.

Another rebuff to the needle

VANCOUVER (CP) — The College of Physicians and Surgeons has given the needle to a proposal by British Columbia acupuncturists for a truce in the controversy which has seen the college prosecute a number of acupuncturists for practising medicine without a licence.

The acupuncturists had offered to accept prior diagnosis by a doctor as a condition for accepting patients.

In return, the practice of acupuncture by non-medical doctors would be made legal and all practitioners, medical doctors or non-medical doctors, would agree to be tested to establish their competence.

Dr. Craig Arnold, the college's deputy registrar, said Monday the answer still is no, a response which angered Grant Smith, president of the Western Acupuncture Association.

"Acupuncture has been proved successful for 5,000 years and accepted by most of the world," said Smith, "and I don't know why this two-bit college can't accept it."

Lights, siren on

SURREY (CP) — A police car involved in a fatal collision had its emergency lights flashing and siren activated before the crash, RCMP said Monday. Annie McDonald, 63, of Surrey was killed in the Saturday night incident in this Vancouver suburb.

Boeing contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Butler Service Group Inc., has been awarded a multi-million-dollar contract by the Boeing Company to establish an engineering facility in Vancouver that will design mechanical equipment for the proposed Boeing 767 aircraft.

Right man in the right place

VANCOUVER (CP) — Off-duty ambulance driver Ross Keetley was the right man in the right place Sunday night, and at least three people probably owe their lives to the coincidence.

Keetley, 23, just happened to be driving with his girl friend a few car lengths behind three cars which were involved in an accident on Highway 99, just south of here.

"I pulled over and drove onto the shoulder so I wouldn't be in the way of any emergency vehicles," Keetley said from his job at the British Columbia Ambulance Service.

"I got my first-aid equipment out of the trunk and jogged up to the area. First, I briefly examined each patient."

Eight people were injured in the crash, three of them seriously, and one, Margret Watts, 84, of Richmond, was killed.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

Opening lead — four of spades.

Insanity is surely a liability at the bridge table, though it must be acknowledged that a schizophrenic bid or play will occasionally score a resounding success.

Let's examine this deal where West, apparently suffering from delusions of grandeur, chose a low spade as his opening lead. This might have worked out well had dummy come down with the K-J-x-x of spades and declarer, holding two low spades, played the jack from dummy. But this precise holding was extremely unlikely, and West's underlead of the ace should therefore be regarded, at least, as overly imaginative.

In the actual case, declarer was greatly helped by the lead. When dummy's queen of spades won the first trick, South was able to discard a heart from his hand and thus solve the problem of avoiding a possible heart loser.

But when declarer then led the eight of trumps from dummy and East played the ten, South had to solve a problem of an entirely different kind. Ordinarily, this would have been a mighty difficult problem to solve — depending on whether East had the Q-10 or A-10 of trumps.

In the former case the jack would be the winning play; in the latter case the king would be the winning play. But South found the right play without too much sweat or strain. He played the king and caught West's singleton queen.

Declarer's reasoning was simple enough. South realized that although West might have been completely off his rocker to have underled the ace of spades at trick one, he could hardly have been crazy enough to have done so with two aces in his hand. It therefore followed that East had the ace of diamonds. Accordingly, declarer went up with the king and thus made the slam.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, August 29
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make decision concerning investment, finances, whether or not to back one close to you in "risky" venture. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. You can make a new contact which proves of tremendous benefit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Partnership, co-operative efforts and marital status are highlighted. Cancer, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Be aware of public responses, image, legal technicalities. You receive news from one who was your advisor in past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid direct confrontations. Have alternative methods at hand. Highlight humor, flexibility and versatility. Sagittarius, Virgo and another Gemini figure prominently. You'll have reason to celebrate as money and health pictures shine brighter!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with affairs of heart, speculation, imprinting of style, young persons and locating an "escape hatch." Member of opposite sex comments on your charisma, flatters you and wants something for nothing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Obtain valuable hint by reading Cancer message. Be prepared for change, travel, gain through creative efforts — and love. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in exciting scenario. Past efforts bear fruit. You'll be more secure!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home, family figure prominently. Be receptive, diplomatic — avoid controversy. You gain most by giving a little — inflexible attitude proves costly. Short trip, special call or message punctuates day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get reliable financial information. Check sources, count your change, avoid basing decisions on wishful thinking. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Spotlight on payments, collections, obtaining valid appraisals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take lead — emphasis on producing, showing that you can respond well under pressure. You are given more responsibility, authority and money. Cycle high — you win plaudits through application of unique methods. Member of opposite sex says you're marvelous — and means it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can celebrate "mission completed." Aries, Libra figure prominently. Accent on clandestine situations, private conferences. Hospital, the media, a special communication crowd scenario. Way is open for better display and more effective distribution.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have momentum; strive for new chances for success, added independence. You get to heart of matters — and could fall madly in love. Leo, Aquarius, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Romantic interlude is a highlight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obstacle serves as "stimulant." Means you rise to occasion — challenge tests your mettle. Superior is impressed, makes room at top. Another Aquarian, a Cancer and Leo figure in your personal scenario. Follow through on hunch. You'll win!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Path is cleared of emotional debris. Means you see daylight; what seemed a haunting predicament will be resolved. Key is to be open to spiritual insights. Open lines of communication. Long-range view brings desired results.

IF AUGUST 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are a natural teacher, psychologist — you have strong humanitarian instincts. Your social conscience is developed; your intuition is sharply honed. You are emotional, psychic, romantic and idealist, subject to moods and susceptible to allergies. You are dynamic, dramatic, attractive and capable of knowing when truth is told as contrasted to labyrinthine tale of deception. Cancer, Leo, Agurius persons play important roles in your life. August was a month in which you faced up to responsibilities, met commitments, had a "showdown" with one who felt you were obligated to a long-term relationship. You get "fresh air" of a new lifestyle, beginning in October.

You might think it no great achievement, but what's the value of that PEAR?

```

Airbus run proposed by AirWest

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

AirWest Airlines Ltd. of Vancouver has applied to the federal air transport committee for the right to operate Victoria's first airbus service to the Lower Mainland.

It would run between Pat Bay airport and Vancouver International Airport.

The proposal was unveiled Monday in Victoria by company owner Jim Pattison. He said the company will spend $2.5 million to buy two 48-seat HS 748 planes to operate the service.

AirWest has had four similar proposals rejected by Ottawa and a rival company, West Coast Airlines last week announced it is applying for a new service between the two airports.

But there are two new factors in the AirWest application. First, this is the first application under the new management and it is the first application for an airbus service.

Under the proposal, passengers would be taken on a free bus to Victoria airport where they would board the plane. At Vancouver airport they would be met by another bus taking them downtown.

This means the new service would supplement the present float plane run.

"I don't think Ottawa will reject this proposal," Pattison said in an interview. "We are just trying to move passengers who otherwise would be stranded."

On many days, especially in winter, the float planes cannot take off because of fog, early dark or bad flying conditions.

"The airbus would be a supplementary service when the float planes are grounded."

Two of the 748 planes will be purchased, at $1.25 million each, from Philippine Airlines and could be used on other routes in B.C.

Pattison said AirWest will spend another $2.5 million to buy two additional float planes. He said he expects approval momentarity for a new Seattle-Vancouver service to complete the triangle run. Float planes now fly Victoria-Vancouver and Victoria-Seattle.

Meanwhile, the airbus service between Victoria and Vancouver is being developed by Dick Laidman, who has been appointed by Pattison as president of AirWest Airlines.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young favors airbus service while Victoria Chamber of Commerce and some aldermen prefer expansion of some downtown-to-downtown route such as more float planes, STOL craft or helicopters.

Pattison said Monday Dash-7 STOL craft are not feasible for Victoria at this time because of the high price tag, $6.5 million each.

"The interest alone on that kind of money is $1 million a year. You can't recapture costs of that magnitude at $28 a seat (the ticket price between Victoria alnd Vancouver on a float plane)."

West Coast Airlines said it will consider using Dash-7 planes on its proposed service between Pat Bay and Vancouver airport if its application is approved.

Pattison said AirWest will oppose the application by West Coast for the land-based Pat Bay-Vancouver airport service.

The airbus service could begin as early as Nov. 15, the date the first 748 plane is delivered, Pattison said.

Fiddlers a first for feisty old fair

A fiddlers' competition, miniature donkeys, entertainment by ethnic groups and exhibits of prize cattle from all over Vancouver Island will be some of the attractions at the 111th annual Saanichton Fair over the Labor Day weekend.

"It's going to be bigger and better," said general secretary Mrs. Margaret Oakes. "We also have some unusual events."

There will be a rooster-crowing contest, a cow-milking contest and a livestock parade.

Another new attraction is the entertainment program organized by 13 ethnic groups. Performances on a new stage will take place daily from noon to 6 p.m.

The groups will represent Hungary, Japan, Norway, the Philippines, Spain, China, Ireland, Scotland, Poland and Latin America. The Saanich and Gulf Island Multi-Cultural Society also will perform.

Dairy and beef cattle — Ayrshire, Jersey, Holstein, Angus, Hereford and Shorthorn — have been entered in the livestock section.

Strong competition is expected in the sheep, swine and goat classes.

For people interested in horses of a bygone era, there will be a show of Clydesdales and Percherons. They will also participate in two and four-horse hitch driving competitions.

Other attractions will be 4-H Club competitions, bird and rabbit shows, and Indian arts and crafts exhibitions.

The finest in homemade wine from cellars in Victoria and Saanich Peninsula will be on display. The competition is sponsored by the Amateur Winemakers' Clubs of Victoria.

In the horticultural hall, there will be prize blooms in the fall flower division. These will include new varieties of gladiola and chrysanthemum.

The show will feature marigolds, zinnias, asters, roses, begonias, and many indoor plants.

Although it has been a dry summer, fair officials expect the quality of the vegetables and fruits grown in Saanich Peninsula gardens to be high and an improvement over last year.

The three-day horse show featuring English and western riding events includes entries from the mainland. It will start with junior competitions on Saturday and end with jumping classes on Monday.

Keenleyside setting out on historic return trip

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside sets off Wednesday for Japan where he will attend a four-day conference Aug. 31-Sept. 4 in Hachioji, 30 miles from the centre of Tokyo.

The gathering will see ex-ambassadors, historians, politicians, diplomats and academics converge on Hachioji to commemorate the opening, 50 years ago, of a Canadian diplomatic mission in Japan. It was the first extension of Canada's foreign diplomatic mission in Japan and the first of Canada's foreign relations beyond the United States, Britain and France.

Keenleyside, the second secretary with the department of external affairs in Ottawa, had the responsibility of opening that mission.

Today, at 80, he is the only one living of a small group of senior officials involved with him in formal procedures necessary before he announced (the day after arriving in Japan) that as of May 21, 1929, a Canadian legation was established in Tokyo.

He was charge d'affaires in that legation until Herbert Marler arrived, some months later, to become Canada's first ambassador to Japan. At that time he was named first secretary, a position held until 1936, when he returned to Canada.

Keenleyside . . . back to Japan

There have been other events in recent months to mark this important 50th anniversary, among them a three-day conference in Toronto last May where Dr. Keenleyside joined a group of prominent Japanese and Canadians.

"Discussion there revolved mainly around economic relations between our two countries, past, present and future," he says.

"At the up-coming conference in Hachioji, the largest non-government gathering supported by Japan and Canada, discussions will centre more on cultural, political and other such aspects."

Here he added with quiet pride that he has been asked to speak at the opening ceremonies and that his talk will be based largely on personal memories.

They include delivering an official note that said the legation was established, to Japan's Foreign Affairs Minister Giichi Tanaka, who was also prime minister at that time, and of meeting Shigeru Yoshida, deputy minister of foreign affairs who was later to be elected Prime Minister.

"I was exceptionally fortunate in my relationship with that most remarkable man," Keenleyside says, "and I shall always think of my friendship with him as one of the great privileges of my public career."

His recollections also include staying in the original Imperial Hotel when he first arrived and of the move from there to a temporary rented residence that in the beginning served as both living quarters and legation office.

"I had invited all the Canadians to Japan and most of them came," Keenleyside says.

"Quite a few of them were missionaries, social workers and teachers who had been in Japan for years. Some of the older ones had tears in their eyes as our flag — the Red Ensign at that time, of course — was raised and a record of O Canada played."

Much of Keenleyside's work in the months before Ambassador Marler arrived was centred around finding a temporary residence for him and suitable office space for a permanent chancellery.

"A residence was found in a somewhat pretentious but poorly designed building where Marler did live for a short time.

"Office space was obtained in a western-style building near the Tokyo railway station and we used that accommodation until our own embassy and office buildings were ready a few years later."

It was same Canadian Embassy where Keenleyside will stay as guest of the present ambassador, Hon. Bruce Rankin, on his current visit to Tokyo.

During Dr. Keenleyside's distinguished public career he has held many responsible positions.

He has been ambassador to Mexico, Commissioner to the Northwest Territories, High Commissioner to Newfoundland and director-general with the United Nations Technical Assistance Administration.

In more recent years he was assistant commissioner at Habitat in Vancouver.

Since then he has completed a study for the provincial government on regulations governing electric installations in British Columbia as well as a report on fire services throughout the province, and in both instances most of his recommendations have been implemented.

At present he is chairman of the steering committee for Saanich's proposed international school of gardening.

Sculpted-jewelry hot seller

NEW YORK NYT — When Marcia Yerman walks, there's a tinkling of small bells and a castanet clicking of shells. She's wearing her found-object necklace made of Oriental bells, wooden spools, an odd earring or two and, yes, the clam shells left over from a dinner, now lacquered a rosy red. "I'm a scavenger," she says. "I see possibilities in the things people throw out."

The necklace is her favorite, and it is not for sale. But the rest of Miss Yerman's imaginative sculptured collection is. It includes a ceramic necklace of iridescent green beads with bars dipped in gilt radiating from its center; a two-yard-long wraparound rope of beads painted in lovely, murky colors and ending with disks implanted with parts of an old clock, and amusing stickpins to brighten up a tailored suit.

The 25-year-old New York City sculptor has a bachelor of fine arts degree from Tufts University and has also studied at the School of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. When she returned to New York after graduation from both schools, she found she was another pebble on the beach of young talent, with no business experience. The only job she could get was as a salesclerk in Macy's. A year and a half on that, she said, pushed her into what she really wanted to do. She had been making jewelry for her family and friends.

"I spent a month working day and night to develop a line," she relates. Then came the round of galleries and stores. A New York gallery showed her work in an exhibit of new talent and encouraged her to show her pieces to the fashion magazines. Vogue loved them, and so, eventually, did Bergdorf Goodman, which carries some of her things.

The young jeweler describes her work as art-oriented. She makes what she calls archery-cuff bracelets. They are curved ceramic plaques painted in various geometric designs which, instead of slipping on, tie on the wrist with thin gilt cords. Her stickpins and hair ornaments may be made of painted feathers, or wood, or ceramic, some of them quivering with gold wires.

All are handmade, and since she rarely repeats herself, are virtually one of a kind. Prices range from $80 to $150 for necklaces, $45 to $60 for bracelets and $20 to $35 for stickpins and earrings. Miss Yerman will do custom-made pieces by appointment.

Petty savers laughing now

NEW YORK — They scoffed and jeered and laughed and ridiculed, and now they're getting their comeuppance. The people they called weirdos are having the last laugh. What with inflation in the United States hitting 13.2 per cent annually, petty economies are no longer a hoot.

"You name it, I do it," said Suzanne Varney, president of Carleton V, a fabric and wall-covering firm. "If I use paper towels to mop up water, I let them dry and re-use them. I never throw out a shirt without cutting off the buttons. I save all the bags from the supermarket. If I stay in a hotel, I always bring the soap home. I have trouble throwing away anything usable."

Mrs. Varney is not a johnny-come-lately in the field of small economies. She's a veteran, and has pretty well refined the art. She saves boxes, but only attractive ones, and interesting ribbon from gift packages.

"It has to be fabulous ribbon, not just any ribbon," she said.

Alice Netter, an active volunteer worker and wife of Richard Netter, a partner in the law firm of Netter, Dowd & Alfieri, was stunned when she discovered that not everybody followed her routine with ketchup bottles. When even banging won't get another drop out of the bottle, she turns it upside down, puts it on top of a freshly opened bottle of ketchup and leaves it overnight to drip itself slowly empty.

Laura Holland can remember her mother following the same procedure with bottled salad dressing. Mrs. Holland, whose husband, Jerome, is a former United States ambassador to Sweden, doesn't bother about ketchup or salad dressing, but she will spend considerable time undoing knots in string so that she can roll it up and save it, and every rubber band and paper clip that enters the house remains until put to good use.

Boy's tumor frozen out

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Doctors reported they have used a tissue-freezing method to remove a tumor from the throat of an 11-year-old boy, saving his life and sparing him major surgery.

Dr. Bradley Rodgers and Dr. James Talbert of the University of Florida Health Centre said they believe Matthew Smith of Jacksonville is the first child in the United States to have a tumor deep within the trachea destroyed by cryosurgery.

The same type of cold method, at a temperature of -180 Celsius, has been used in numerous other cases to remove scar tissue which sometimes forms in the windpipe after injuries.

The growth was described as a rare mixed tumor of the minor salivary gland, with the scientific name of pleomorphic adenoma, presumably formed by cells misplaced during embryonic development.

Without cryosurgery, he said, surgeons likely would have removed Matthew's entire voice box with the tumor, or used cobalt therapy, which leaves scarring.

New class threads may strain budgets

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices are predictably higher for back-to-school clothes for the fashion-conscious high school or collegiate set. And it won't be easy for the budget-bound student to be turned out in the very latest threads.

The others will have to hunt and search for cheaper versions of the hot items. Overalls, for instance, are available at $90 but also for $30.

Francine's so casual in her attitude to fashion that she cuts her own hair. And she doesn't go the jeans route the entire week at school.

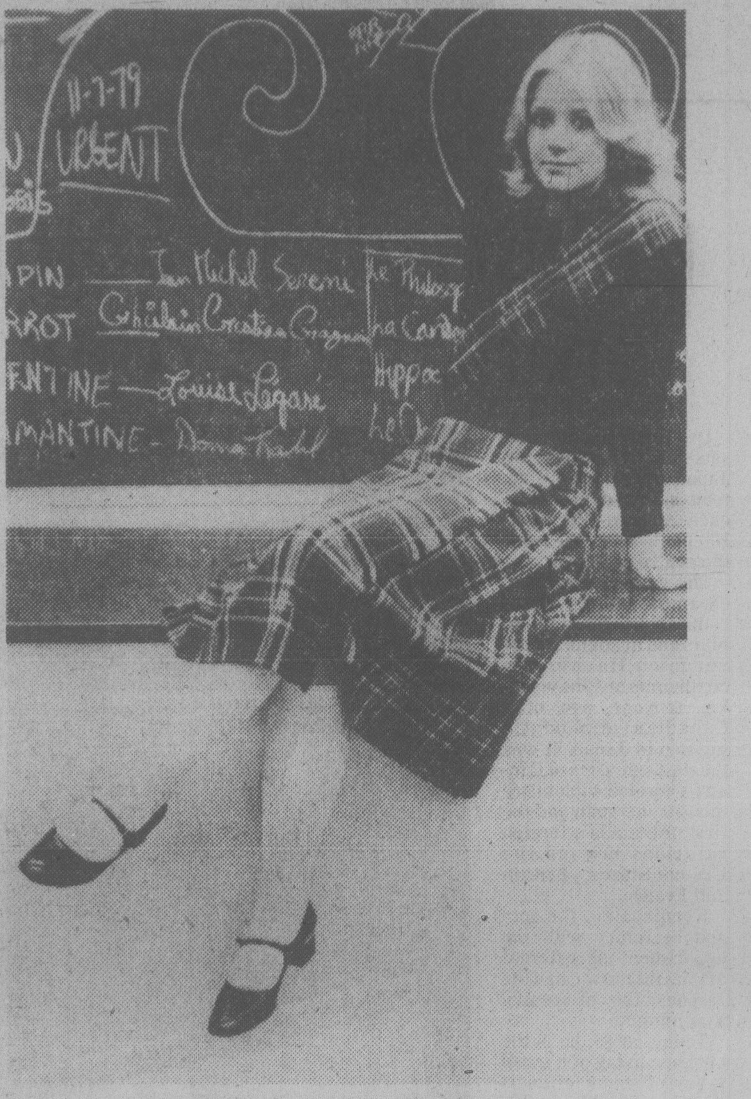
"I have a system," she said. "I wear jeans four days and on the fifth I wear a skirt and sweater. Then everyone tells me how good I look.

"If I wore skirts and sweaters every day, the day I wore jeans they'd say how bad I look."

The racks in the college departments of many Canadian stores are full of the basic — jeans of every cut and label, designed to accommodate even the most difficult shape; easy wrapped skirts, the most popular again in blue denim; blazers in subtle tweeds or dressy velvets; shirts and sweaters galore.

Plaid is the latest fabric darling, seen in cowboy shirts but also in neatly-fitting dresses for day and night.

Perfect for fall dinner date



Kilts are back in style — pretty but expensive

THE CASUAL LOOK comes from these high-priced chrome yellow overalls, selling for $90 and paired with a Roadrunner plaid skirt. For those without such expensive tastes, overalls are also available at more modest prices.

Better drop this hot potato fast

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am a 15-year-old girl and I have a boyfriend who is 19. My problem is that whenever my boyfriend and I see each other, all he is interested in is sex. He never takes me out anywhere because he says we can have more fun alone together at his place.

I don't know what to do. I don't want to break up with him because I love him. But he never tells me he loves me, and I always tell him I love him. I don't know what to do.

ANSWER: If he has never told you he loves you, yet you love him, then it is not a fully sharing relationship. If he never takes you out but wants to stay in and have fun with sex, and that is not what you want, then he is exploiting you for his own pleasure. As soon as he gets tired of you he will drop you.

It is good that you have loved him, but it is painful that he does not love you. Better suffer the pain of dropping him, fast, and feel that you are a whole person who can respect herself, than be miserable because you have been let down by him.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am a 19-year-old girl and I have great difficulty expressing my feelings. I have to decide what my views are before I can express them, but sometimes I get in a situation I'm not ready for.

For example, a guy I was going out with told me one day how he felt about relationships — he outlined his "terms" more or less. I sat and listened but honestly couldn't think how to respond.

He got upset and asked me to tell him my feelings but I felt stupid and said I didn't know. This has often happened. Even after I think about things I have trouble expressing my thoughts.

My father has the same inability to express feelings at the right time, and I have seen how many problems this has caused in my family. What actual steps can I take to change?

ANSWER: I can see you are at a disadvantage in a society that puts so much emphasis on expressing feelings. I think some people go too far in expressing all kinds of feelings — to the point of self-indulgence.

However, in your case I think you are aware of yourself and of your father's problems, so it is reasonable for you to try to do something about it. There are various programs put on by the "Y," boards of education or universities. See if you can find a group that sounds right to you. There are a lot of "games" such groups play to develop means of expressing the self.

If you feel you are getting in too deep or are uncomfortable with what you chose, then I think you should try some personal counselling. Again you should try the "Y" in your community for this kind of help.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4. Readers may wish to talk about their problems. They can call NEED at 386-6323.

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

Paid in full. . . and then some

ATHENS (CP) — Farmer George Papadopoulos was outraged when he was charged $10 for a simple meal of kebab, salad and a carafe of wine in a local tavern. After an argument, he paid the bill but felt the debt wasn't settled yet. The next day he was back — on his tractor — which he drove through the tavern door, smashing tables and chairs and terrorizing the staff.

Only gas hog answer: Improve driving habits

WHEELS

by Mike Lamm

DEAR MIKE: I truly need your help. I have a car that's really a gas hog. It's a 1976 Olds 98 sedan with the 455-cid V-8. I've taken off all the smog junk, but this car still averages only seven mpg and has from the day I bought it. I get it tuned twice a year, change oil regularly, and enjoy driving the car. I don't want to get rid of it, but it's eating me out of house and home. What can I do for better gas mileage? — BEING CONSUMED

DEAR BEING: Half the letters I get nowadays ask this question. And most people mention that they've removed their car's emissions equipment. I feel I have to answer in two parts.

First, when you take off a car's "smog junk," you'll most likely end up with worse gas mileage than before. Unless you're an automotive engineer or a very experienced mechanic, all you do when you remove a car's emissions system is ruin the engine's fairly delicate fuel/air/spark balance. You then end up with a poorer-running engine and greater fuel consumption. While it's true that factory emission equipment reduces engine efficiency, it's also true that removing it almost always reduces it even more. So my first recommendation is to leave a car's smog system strictly alone and, in fact, to keep it in the best possible working condition.

Second, no gimmick or gizmo is going to give you better fuel mileage. You'll find, for example, that a 2-barrel carburetor in place of your present 4-barrel won't make much difference. Your Olds already runs a relatively high axle ratio (2.56:1), so changing that won't help either.

What you've got to change are your driving habits. Ease up on the accelerator pedal whenever possible. Slow down. Give just enough gas to hold your speed. And the less your right foot moves up and down the better your fuel mileage will become. Calm, steady, even driving is the secret.

DEAR MIKE: I have a 1976 Trans Am Limited Edition without the hatch roof. A friend of mine says all Limited Editions had to have the hatch roof or they weren't Limited Editions. Is that true? How may Limited Edition T/A's did Pontiac make? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Pontiac built 2400 Limited Edition Trans Ams for 1976, 643 with hatch roofs and 1757 without. Early hatches tended to leak, so they were discontinued for the rest of the model year.

Small cars need smoother roads

WASHINGTON (AP) — The trend toward smaller, lighter cars will eventually require different and better roads, says the Road Information Program. It says compact cars must have smooth road surfaces to avoid mechanical damage. Some transportation experts are also calling for lanes that would separate auto traffic from heavyweight buses and trucks.

Marrow transplants help fight leukemia

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Leukemia patients at five medical centres in the United States are receiving transplants of their own healthy bone marrow cells to determine how effective the procedure is in conjunction with chemotherapy and radiation treatment.

The new technique, called "autologous marrow transplant," involves freezing bone marrow cells taken at a time when the disease is in remission and then returning the healthy cells to the patient after subsequent treatment with drugs or radiation.

"The stored marrow, you see, gives us the option of using very high doses of chemotherapy and radiation — doses which are actually lethal because they destroy the majority of bone marrow cells in the patient," said Dr. W. Ralph Vogler, professor of medicine at Emory University's Woodruff Medical Centre.

"Without the marrow transplant for support, the patient would not survive that much chemotherapy and radiation," he said. "As it is, we can destroy a much higher percentage of cancer cells, restore the bone marrow with a transplant and give the patient a greater chance of long-term remission."

In the case of the one Emory patient who has received a transplant, marrow cells were taken from a hip bone while her leukemia was in remission after chemotherapy. The cells were frozen in liquid nitrogen at a temperature of -0 Celsius.

"When the leukemia returned, standard chemotherapy did not produce a second remission," Vogler said.

A combination of high doses of chemotherapy and total body radiation was administered to kill cancerous cells. Then doctors thawed the frozen marrow and returned the cells to the patient.

"This treatment has produced a second remission in the patient," said Vogler. "The patient's been doing fine for six to eight months."

Regular ground beef may be a better buy than extra-lean. Panel tests have established that regular hamburgers are juicier and more tasty. Cooked ground beef patties weighed about the same as, and contained 1 gram of fat more than the extra-lean. Both contained the same amount of protein.

When macaroni or other pasta is to be used in cold salads, add the dressing while the pasta's hot for better flavor blending and to prevent sticking. Ask owners of a house you might buy for the name of their plumber — he's familiar with past plumbing problems. This could save another plumber's problem-probing time.

Some shrinkage can be expected as most suede and leather garments age, says a drycleaning expert. Shrinkage may also show up during the drycleaning cycle if the leathers were over-stretched at the time the garment was made. For these reasons, he recommends buying a leather garment a size larger. Save the sales slip when you buy leather, just in case it shrinks too much after the first cleaning. A drycleaner can't always prevent shrinkage of over-stretched skins.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

Parkinson's disease, long an enigma, is being studied from a totally new angle that may eventually revolutionize the understanding and treatment of this complicated brain damage disorder.

Dr. Richard J. Wyatt, of the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md., has embarked on a study of brain tissue grafts in experimental animals. These animals, suffering from Parkinson's-like conditions, were distinctly improved by this unusual technique.

It is the hope of these experimental physiologists that the basic scientific work may yet be translated in human beings and eventually improve and control this disorder.

The virus that produces influenza seems to change from year to year. One of the main problems in the control of influenza is the rapidity with which these new virus strains spread around the world and produce mass epidemics.

Dr. Daniel L. Azarnoff, chief research investigator of the pharmaceutical company, G. D. Searle, predicts that soon it will be possible to develop new flu vaccines so rapidly that the influenza virus may be kept from spreading.

He believes that, with newer techniques, a vaccine may be made available to combat not only all known strains, but future strains as well. Also, he states that the present, cumbersome methods of vaccine preparation hopefully will be replaced by more rapid ones.

Ulcers of the leg, a devastatingly difficult problem for people who have arteriosclerosis of the blood vessels of the feet and legs, are now responding to a new method of treatment.

Dr. Andrew Szczeklik, of the Copernibus Academy of Medicine in Cracow, Poland, has been using one of the latest of the prostaglandins to cure ulcers, relieve pain and to reduce spasms of the leg, all due to vascular conditions. The substance prostacyclin has proved to be effective in cases unaltered by the present mode of treatment.

Some of the patients in the series that Dr. Szczeklik studied faced amputation of the leg. This calamity was avoided by the new treatment. This is, indeed, an enormous contribution to modern methods of treatment.

Doctors in North America will attempt to duplicate his results. Dr. Szczeklik's original studies were presented to more than a thousand physicians and scientists at the International Prostaglandin Conference. The studies were received with tremendous enthusiasm.

Better to give flowers to living

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I took your advice and went to a psychiatrist. Let me tell you what happened.

The psychiatrist has more problems than I have. In three visits I knew all about his lousy marriage, his rotten kids and his childhood hangups.

I thought a psychiatrist was supposed to let the patient talk, but all mine did was talk about himself. I tried to tell him about my sleepless nights, my feelings of loneliness and frequent depressions, but he always turned the conversation back to himself.

When it comes time for me to leave, I'm so frustrated I can hardly wait to get out of his office.

I told my husband all of the above and he said maybe that was the doctor's way of making me feel that my problems weren't so heavy after all.

Is this the way psychiatrists operate? Or did I pick a lemon? How many more sessions do you think I should have to give him a fair chance to help me with my problems? He charges $40 for 50 minutes.

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: It appears that your psychiatrist needs a psychiatrist. Inform him at your next session that you have decided to see another therapist. Tell him why, and encourage him to seek help from a colleague. If you need help in selecting another therapist, consult your a medical society, your family doctor or your local mental health association. Do not continue with a therapist you're not comfortable with.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a cold husband? Sid and I have been married for 25 years and we aren't old. He says sex is for younger people. Abby, if it were up to him we'd never have sex. I always have to make the first move, then he acts like he's doing me a favor and I wish I hadn't brought it up.

Our children are grown and gone and Sid doesn't like to go anywhere or be around people. He has no hobbies. All he has is his work. He goes to bed around 7 or 7:30 because he's bored and doesn't like TV. He's an excellent provider, doesn't drink or smoke or chase, and is an above-average father. When I ask him to see a counselor with me, he says, "What for? We don't have a problem."

I'm no beauty, but I bathe daily, use deodorant, and I'm not fat or ugly. I am very unhappy living like a nun. I have trouble sleeping and have even considered an affair, but I'm not that kind of person. Any suggestions?

UNNEEDED

DEAR UNNEEDED: Yes. If he won't see a counselor, you see one. You need to learn what to do about a husband who is insensitive to your needs.

FRASER BISCOE'S PIERS ISLAND SEAFRONT OFFERINGS

If you have not yet discovered "PIERS", Western Canada's most unique planned summer cottage community and want complete details about this fascinating "Island in the Sun", almost on the doorstep of the Saanich Peninsula — Call without obligation — below are two current offerings:

A SEAFRONT LOT

With a good view, well treed, a level lot for building and just a few steps down to the fascinating shell and shale beach formations. Located five minutes' stroll from the Island's favoured swimming beach. This is a lot where you can "do your own thing" over a period of time — create a summer place or future retirement home. A place where a family do-it-yourself project can build a sound investment. Price $35,700.

ARTIST OR WRITER

Will appreciate this Eagle's Eyrie — a 400 sq. ft. cottage perched on the most commanding view site on Piers Island. Yes! It has a western exposure and you can see the sun set behind Mt. Taum on Salt Spring, breathtaking seaviews up Satellite Channel of Cherry Point and Cowichan Bay. The combined living room-kitchen area features a natural field-stone fireplace and stainless steel sink. Electric heating. Separate bedroom and three-piece bathroom. A wrap-around patio to appreciate the 180 deg. view. On one of the island's largest lots a winding path aproaches the cottage through cool glades lush with fern and shaded by tall timber. The agile will use the existing rugged path to the good beach below while the more sedate will use nearby accesses or improve the path down to a more acceptable standard. All-in-all, a unique retreat — at only $48,500.

For appointment to view call R. Fraser Biscoe, F.R.I., R.I. (B.C.), Seafront Specialist Realtor, 383-9413 anytime. FRASER BISCOE, Penthouse Office, Executive House, 777 Douglas St., Victoria.

SANDS — DUNCAN

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation to our relatives, friends and neighbours who have been so kind and sympathetic following the death of a beloved wife and mother, Florence Edith Brown. Thank you for the charitable donations, sympathy cards and floral offerings.

309 IN MEMORIAM

ENNIS - In loving memory of our wife, mother, grandmother, greatgrandmother Lula M. Ennis, who passed away August 30, 1972.

Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance, dear, of you.
Lovingly remembered by her husband Tom and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

GARDENING
Jack Beastall

When a plant has a habit peculiar to itself and to no other plant it is interesting to have it in the garden regardless of its splendor, or lack thereof.

Such a plant becomes a conversation piece. A garden that looks drab to a cursory glance can be most entertaining when the peculiarity of each plant is explained to visitors.

This is where the really smart gardeners shine. They may have neither a large garden nor a large collection of plants, but the story of each plant is known and told to all who visit.

If you should happen to meet some of these visitors in your own garden at a later date, they will recount the story of several plants as told them by their smart gardener friend.

This shows that the story of a plant, something of its history or the details of its first discovery, some habit of growth or flowering that is not readily apparent, is as interesting as the plant itself, if not more so.

The habits of many of our flowering plants, both annuals and perennials, are quite distinct from the general pattern.

Some open their flowers at almost the same minute by the clock each afternoon. In fact, you can tell the time by their actions if you are working in the garden.

Others have the reverse habit: closing their flowers at a given time in the afternoon, or starting to drop their petals, all of which will have fallen within an hour.

Certain flowers are extremely sensitive to air temperature. A difference of one degree determines whether the blooms will be open or closed.

Some plants which are normally biennial in habit — making growth the first year from seed, flowering the next year, then withering — can be induced to act as perenials and flower for many years when all flower stems are removed in the second season.

To see a large planting of biennials acting as perennials is most interesting to visiting gardeners.

Many genera contain desirable garden plants that are directly related to our native plants, the plants gardeners call weeds. These weeds are the species that thrive in the more northern latitudes whereas the desirables are the weeds of another area.

It is quite a shock to visiting gardeners to learn the plant they are admiring is the beautiful sister to a plant they abhor and frantically destroy.

Facts of this nature are worth collecting and recording because they engender a greater personal interest in the plants themselves as well as being of increased garden value because of their conversational potentials.

Much of this information can be obtained from the nurseryman who grows the plants you are thinking of obtaining, providing you express the interest.

More still can be found in library books on plant hunting and plant history — not least the pathetic story of Angelo and his search for a miniature daffodil he had seen in the wilds, and the tears he shed when at last it was found. It was named Angelo's Tears, the Angel's Tears we grow in our gardens today.

Those who profess to have no interest in plant names or in their history, saying that as long as the plant grows nothing else matters, are missing one of the greatest thrills of gardening.

Tories name top director

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Curley, 37, of Calgary, has been appointed national director of the Progressive Conservative party — a position which has been vacant since March, 1978.

By SELWYN RAAB
New York Times

NEW YORK — Behind the recent upsurge in bank robberies in the city are a new type of criminal and new type of bank, law-enforcement experts say.

Only a decade ago, the police profile of the average bank robber was that of an experienced, professional criminal who usually worked with a heavily armed team on few well-planned holdups.

Today, the experts say, the average bank robber is in his 20s, unemployed, a petty criminal who normally works alone. About half the time he is an unarmed note-passer who decides impulsively which bank to rob. The average loot is less than $1,000, and eventually most of the robbers are arrested.

Another important factor behind the recent holdup increase, experts say, is the proliferation of bank branches, which have been designed apparently with little concern for security. These offices often lack robbery-deterrent devices, such as bullet-resistant shields for tellers, and are usually patrolled by a single unarmed guard.

"A few years ago a bank robbery was a big job," Thomas A. Reppetto, the president of the Citizens Crime Commission of New York City and a criminologist, said Wednesday. "They were like fortresses, with armed guards, thick teller's cages and they were designed to deter crime. You needed heavy weapons, a lot of brains and several people to pull off a robbery successfully."

So far this year, there have been 581 bank robberies in New York City. The total this year is expected to top the record of 641 set in 1977.

Pardons for 400 in Cuba

HAVANA (Reuter) — Cuba has pardoned 400 political prisoners, including Rolando Cubelas, a former revolutionary army leader sentenced to 25 years in 1966 for plotting to kill Premier Fidel Castro, officials said Monday.

The move, which coincided with the beginning of the non-aligned summit, brought to 2,800 the number of political prisoners freed by Cuba in the last eight months.

Under an amnesty agreed with representatives of the Cuban exile community last year, Cuba promised to release 3,600 political detainees at a rate of about 400 a month.

That would leave only about 600 persons jailed in Cuba for political crimes. They were excluded from the amnesty because They were accused of atrocities or being linked to still-active anti-Communist guerrilla groups.

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon (CP) — An uneasy calm prevailed Monday on the border between Israel and Lebanon but one of the area's major military commanders predicted it was only a lull before the storm.

Maj. Saad Haddad, who commands the mainly Christian militias allied with Israel against Palestinian and Lebanese Moslem forces, said his opponents are bringing up more equipment and digging new gun emplacements in the area.

Haddad said he is not a party to the ceasefire which the United Nations says it arranged during the weekend after four days of artillery exchanges.

"Nobody asked me anything," the former Lebanese army officer said. "I stopped firing because the Palestinians did. I will answer if they fire again. But for them the ceasefire is only a chance to reorganize, get new weapons and dig in new positions. They have bulldozers at work right now."

Haddad claimed that the Palestinian-Lebanese forces are pressing UN peacekeeping troops in the area and have set up artillery within the UN-patrolled zone.

He spoke several hours after about 150 leaders from Moslem villages in the zone he controls demonstrated near the Good Fence border crossing point .

Khomeini rejects truce

MAHABAD (UPI) — The Ayatollah Khomeini today rejected talks with Kurdish leaders aimed at a cease-fire and Islamic firing squads executed 20 men accused of involvement in the Kurdish revolt.

Kurdish leaders, with battling rebels and army troops deadlocked, have proposed an immediate cease-fire and an end to summary executions of insurgents by Islamic courts, Kurdish sources said today.

According to the state radio, Khomeini said of the Kurdish offer to talk: "The purpose is not that you negotiate with the criminal leaders. They must be crushed."

Khomeini today also named Hojjatoleslam Haj Sheikh Hosseini Kermani as his coordinator among the military, revolutionary and religious circles in Kurdistan, the state radio reported.

Talks between the Kurdish leaders and government officials began Monday amid fears of a major battle provoked by government attempts to restore authority in Mahabad, still held by Kurds armed with tanks, antiaircraft weapons and artillery.

Two columns of the army were positioned less than 20 miles from Mahabad. But Kurdish leaders insist they see no signs of "attack movements" by the army.

In Tehran, the Kurdish delegation led by Mullah Rahim Abbasi, president of the Mahabad Revolutionary Council, met with Deputy Prime Minister Mostafa Chamran and Sadeq Tabatabai Monday and presented them with a three-point peace plan.

The plan called for an immediate cease-fire, recall of Islamic Judge Sheikh Sadeq Khalkhli and a wide-ranging conference "to solve the Kurdish problem through peaceful means."

But Khalkhali arrived in Saqqez Monday night after ordering the executions of nine men earlier that day in Sanandaj. In Saqqez, retaken by government troops over the weekend, he sentenced 20 more men to death.

The latest executions brought to 542 the total executions since February and to 68 the number of Kurds executed over the past two weeks of fighting in Kurdistan province.

The Kurdish Democratic Party said it had 30,000 men under arms who would fight "till the last drop of their blood."

Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni went to the big island 250 kilometres southwest of Rome for a police meeting last weekend. He also sent over 170 police reinforcements and the first of a squadron of helicopters equipped for nocturnal surveillance of the mountains and meadows where bandits roam.

In the past, foreign visitors were considered immune. One guidebook noted that while banditry still exists on Sardinia, "it is most unusual for visitors to be molested in any way."

But last September a German tourist was abducted and has never been found despite payment of ransom. Police fear that kidnappers also were responsible for the disappearance a week ago of a wealthy British electronics engineer, his wife and their 14-year-old daughter while they were driving back to their vacation villa in northern Sardinia.

Other recent victims of Italian kidnappers included the teen-age children of a Turin bank executive, grabbed from a beach in Sardinia 10 days ago; the 12-year-old son of a Rome construction man, kidnapped from a castle near Perugia, and an eight-year-old boy and four women abducted in Calabria, the southernmost part of mainland Italy and a stronghold of the Mafia.

Pope John Paul denounced the kidnapping of children as "calculated, premeditated acts to inflict suffering for thoughtless, condemnable pursuit of money." Investigators said the abduction of the Calabrian women was evidence that the Mafia was abandoning its tradition of attacks on men only in pursuit of easier money.

Investigators estimate that Italian kidnap gangs collect $12 million to $18 million a year. After a record 75 abductions in 1977, only 36 were reported last year. But this year there have been 35 so far, including the 10 on Sardinia during six weeks of the summer season, when thousands of Italian and foreign tourists descend on the island and Europe's jet set moves into their villas on the Costa Smeralda.

One of the reasons for the decrease in kidnappings last year was believed to be the government's blocking of the bank accounts of victims' families to prevent payment of ransom. But it has no control over the accounts of foreigners outside the country.

The most prominent foreigner kidnapped in Italy was J. Paul Getty III, a grandson of the U.S. oil billionaire. A Calabrian gang grabbed him in Rome six years ago when he was 16, cut off one of his ears when his family was slow to pay up and released him after five months and the payment of a $2.5-million ransom. But he was a resident of Rome, not a tourist.

Carter to China, Hua to visit U.S.

PEKING (AP) — U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale announced today that Hua Guofeng (Hua Kuo-feng), China's premier and Communist party chairman, will visit the United States next year and President Carter will visit China.

Mondale told a news conference after a meeting with Hua that China's top leader accepted Carter's invitation "with delight." He said the dates for Hua's and Carter's visits have not been set.

The vice-president also announced that he will open a U.S. consulate in Canton, "the first consulate we've had in China in over 30 years," when he visits South China's largest city during his tour. He said it will have a staff of seven or eight.

The Chinese government will open consulates in Houston and San Francisco, he said.

Mondale said his visit to China has "laid the basis of our relationship in the 1980s and given real meaning to the word 'normal.' "

The great gluon riddle finally comes unstuck

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Four international teams of scientists announced Monday the discovery of a new particle which might help answer some of the secrets about unification of matter.

The particle, called the gluon, is believed to be the force that holds together the indivisible elementary particles, known as quarks.

Albert Einstein spent most of his career attempting to unify the four forces. However, where Einstein failed, experimental physisists have made major progress.

The challenge of the unification theory is to find particles that carry the four forces. Such particles already have been found for the weak and electrometic forces.

The gluon appears to be the force governing the strong force holding quarks together. If the scientists unify the four forces it might give a profound new understanding of nature and lead to a technological revolution.

Such an understanding would equal or surpass the benefits that resulted from similar efforts in the 1920s and the 1930s, when scientists developed the theory of quantum mechanics. That theoretical breakthrough led to such developments as solid state physics, transistors and nuclear energy.

Suing spouse off back to court

TORONTO (CP) — A man who has confronted his former wife in court about 40 times in the last six years is free to do it again following an Ontario Court of Appeal ruling.

Earlier this month, the court overturned a decision by Madam Justice Janet Boland that would have prevented further suits by Terrence Edmund Foy, a Toronto lawyer, against his former wife, Joan, without the permission of a judge of the Supreme Court.

Madam Justice Boland had invoked the Vexatious Proceedings Act last year after finding Foy's legal actions were laid "habitually and persistently and without any reasonable ground."

In one suit, another judge said legal proceedings were used by Foy to wage war on his family.

It all began in June, 1973, when Foy laid a charge of assault against his wife. A week later, she filed for divorce on the grounds of cruelty and the legal wrangling was under way.

Foy has since laid six more charges of common assault against his former wife; tried to commit her to an institution three times; applied for sole ownership of the family home; and started an action against three police officers, who tried to evict him, and his former wife's counsel, the chief of police, the Metropolitan Toronto board of police commissioners and the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Foy has brought nine actions against her husband, all successful. Foy has been successful in only one action.

The judgment, signed by Ontario Chief Justice William Howland and Mr. Justice John Brooke, concluded that most of Foy's actions were beyond the scope of the Vexatious Proceedings Act.

L. A. Piller, one of Mrs. Foy's lawyers, said Monday that an application to appeal a recent ruling awarding some money to her was filed by Foy last week after the Appeal Court decision went in his favor.

Rabbits hop south

He said in an interview that between 200 and 300 Rabbit diesels have been bought from dealers in Canada and resold in the United States.

'Just rot in the dark'

CALGARY (CP) — "There isn't such a thing as a right to sunlight," an Ontario government lawyer told the Canadian Bar Association on Monday.

Dianne Saxe, solicitor with the Ontario energy ministry, said people who build or adapt homes to use solar power cannot count on their work being of any long-term use to them — they could find themselves in the shade of a new neighboring building with no recourse in general law.

"The courts have never shown any particular interest in protecting sunlight," she said during discussion of legal issues in solar power.

Ms. Saxe said courts have given greater weight to private property rights and the rights of developers to build on their property without worrying about where the shadows of their buildings fall.

That, she said, has generally been the case since a 1586 British decision in which a judge rejected a complaint about loss of sunlight, in effect telling the complainant "you can just rot in the dark."

But despite the lack of absolute right to sunlight, she said, there are many ways in which solar power can be given more security under the existing legal system.

Sometimes useful but generally impractical methods included getting signed agreements with neighboring property owners and having developers put height-restriction covenants on all lots in the subdivisions.

But the best approach, she suggested, would be to integrate solar-power needs with municipal planning and zoning.

In planning, houses could primarily be lined up east-west so that the shadow from the southern sun would fall on the streets or the back yards instead of on other houses.

Rejecting the idea of guaranteed access to sun, she said that would lead to low, spread-out homes that would take up land and require more energy for both travel and heat.

She also warned that some types of solar power collectors could bring legal liabilities.

A motorist who is dazzled by glare from rooftop solar panels could sue if he ran into a tree. And owners of solar collection devices that focus sunlight with mirrors could also be sued if children were attracted by the mirrors and suffered eye damage from focussed sunlight.

Prof. Albert Utton of the University of Mexico law faculty agreed with Ms. Saxe's suggestion that zoning laws are the best method of giving some security to solar power users.

A model zoning ordinance proposed by himself and two other professors, based largely on city ordinances in Los Alamos, N.M., proposes a simple basic restriction on depriving neighbors of sunlight.

Hostage drama ends in cafe

MONTREAL (UPC) — A man who escaped with two hostages from a Quebec City bank branch late Monday was arrested early this morning in an all-night Chinese restaurant in Montreal.

As he entered the restaurant about 5:35 a.m., police came out of hiding and arrested him.

The hostages, bank mananger Michel Leblond, 40, and teller Denise St. Hilaire, 30, were unharmed and needed no medical aid, police said.

Arrested was Germain Gagne, 24. Police said Gagne and the freed hostages would be driven back to Quebec City immediately.

About 11:20 p.m. Monday, police acceded to his demand for a getaway car and a 45-minute headstart. The man released 10 of his hostages — some of them hysterical — uninjured, then drove off with the other two.

Prison campaign

MONTREAL (CP) — Home after six days in a Haitian prison, Canadian school teacher Bernier Pierre says there are many other political prisoners in his native Haiti.

The 42-year-old French teacher at Granby, Que., told a news conference Monday he brought the names of nine other prisoners out of jail with him and will campaign for their release or at least for a fair trial.

As a provincial court was told Monday, it all started on May 3 when Mrs. McGuigan took her driving test.

She and the driving examiner were in a borrowed car at the Ontario ministry of transportation and communication's licence bureau, parked beside two other test cars, when all three backed out at the same time.

Mrs. McGuigan backed into a fourth car and failed the test before it began.

McGuigan told the court that he wanted to settle the matter without involving his wife or insurance companies.

"I wanted to pay for the damage out of my own pocket so no one's insurance would go up," he said.

But because Mrs. McGuigan's maiden name was on her temporary driver's permit, the owner of the damaged car doubted her identity. When he attempted to question Mrs. McGuigan a second time, her husband intercepted and pulled him away from Mrs. McGuigan, who by this time was in tears.

A nod for Concorde

TORONTO (CP) — The supersonic Concorde aircraft has special permission to wag its wings briefly in Canadian airspace Saturday before it carries 100 passengers to England on a one-time commercial flight from Canada.

Passengers — including Ontario's lieutenant-governor — who board the one-way flight to London after the Canadian National Exhibition air show will sip champagne and munch caviar for four hours at $1,069 a seat.

"If I had all the money in the world I would only travel by Concorde to Europe," said Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon.

"There is no jet lag," said Mrs. McGibbon Monday, who flew by Concorde to London from New York last year.

"You just sit down and have dinner and you are there."

However, British Airways has no immediate plans to seek a regular commercial route out of Canada for the Concorde.

McKenzie link talks start

Negotiations are about to start with property owners in the path of a planned four-lane extension of McKenzie Avenue, Deputy Highways Minister Tom Johnston said today.

Johnston denied there has been a cover-up and said the ministry waited to inform residents about the new route until it was positive what property would have to be taken.

A public map wasn't made available because ministry appraisers and property buyers wanted a chance to do their work quietly, he said.

Johnston refused to say how many properties will be directly affected, saying the plan is still in the preliminary stages.

He said he doesn't know if Dennis Rand, of 836 Tulip, is one of the homeowners who must be expropriated.

Rand, who just finished building an $8,000 garage next to the home he bought four months ago, said Monday he was told by a highways ministry source his property is in the path of the highway.

Johnston said he will be happy to meet with any residents to discuss the extension, which will link the Pat Bay and TransCanada highways.

He said ministry officials have been corresponding with residents all along and planners and designers held an on site meeting recently with them.

Johnstone said he resents allegations plans to extend and widen McKenzie between Glanford and Interurban were kept secret because of design errors.

The route was then shifted 25 feet from the edge of the buildings and moved 95 feet away last month after co-op residents complained.

Johnston described the changes as a "modest realignment" and said preliminary drawings approved recently by Saanich council create as little negative impact on the community as possible.

But upset residents say they weren't consulted about the route changes that swing the highway closer to homes bought in good faith years ago, residents charge.

Joan Laherty, of 701 Daisy, said: "I have yet to speak to anyone who has spoken to the highways department."

Laherty, who has lived at her current address 20 years, said residents feel they have been lied to and are circulating a petition protesting the extension route.

Meanwhile a Marigold Co-operative spokesman says the development has been double-crossed by the highways ministry and Saanich municipality.

Daniela Gauvin said members of the 86-unit housing development met once in July with ministry and Saanich officials over the four-lane extension — and haven't heard from either since.

Gauvin said she was promised further meetings with highways planners to discuss other vital details, such as a buffer zone of trees, landscaping and a protective wall.

PoWs pick Victoria site

Norman Rubenstein, president of the B.C. chapter of the National Prisoners of War, said about 250 delegates are expected to attend, probably in the last week of August.

In addition to being officially invited by the mayor, the prisoners' group received financial help from the provincial government and was assisted by the federal government.

Defence and Veterans Affairs Minister Allan McKinnon arranged for Victoria delegates to fly by armed forces air transport when the B.C. chapter said it could not muster the funds for fares.

Rubenstein said the first objective of NPOW is to improve benefits for all ex-prisoners.

At present, he said, Canada, Belgium and France are the only nations which recognize the hardships endured by servicemen after their capture.

IWA to serve strike notice in Interior

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Woodworkers of America will serve 72-hour strike notice Thursday on forest companies in the northern Interior, Jack Munro, the union's western region president, said Monday.

Negotiators for the companies have refused to budge on a union demand for a change in the contract expiry date.

The union wants the contract to expire June 15, the same day as the contract for southern workers. The companies, however, want Aug. 31 and Sept. 30 as expiry dates so companies will not face job action during the peak summer logging season.

"They're the only part of the industry that is hanging out two or three months behind the entire industry in the province," Munro said. "They should get in step.

Complete results of voting by the two northern Interior locals are not yet in, but an IWA official in Prince George said Monday that workers are voting about 75 per cent in favor of strike action.

However, a spokesman for the North Cariboo Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for the companies, said the vote count was only 49 per cent in favor of strike action.

Munro said votes from three isolated operations, one of which is on holidays, have not been heard from, but "we certainly have enough."

He said he hopes the strike notice will elicit some response from industry negotiators on the expiry date issue. No meetings are scheduled.

The wage offer is the same as that accepted by coastal and southern Interior IWA members. It provides wage increases of 90 cents an hour in the first year and 90 cents or 9.5 per, whichever is greater, in the second.

Coaches row going to LRB

Representatives of Pacific Coach Lines and the union representing its 14 bus dispatchers will meet at the Labor Relations Board Wednesday in Vancouver.

It is hoped the meeting will resolve a dispute in which all the dispatchers have been reporting to work at 8 a.m. and refusing shift work. Those scheduled for 8 a.m. shifts have worked while those assigned to other shifts have been sent home.

The dispatchers, members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, are protesting what they call management's refusal to honor the terms of a contract which expired March 31, 1979.

Union business agent Franz Scherubl said in Vancouver today he understands six of the dispatchers have been suspended by the company but company labor relations manager Bob Ellis said no employee has been suspended.

Ellis said bus schedules have not been affected by the dispute and he doesn't expect they will be.

Leaders meeting here

Government leaders from Alaska and the Yukon will be in Victoria Wednesday for talks with Premier Bill Bennett.

Alaska Governor Jay Hammond, Yukon Commissioner Ione Christensen, and Bennett will discuss energy and economics at the annual heads-of-government meeting.

Yukon Progessive-Conservative leader Chris Pearson will join the group. His party holds the majority in the Yukon legislature and he would become the Yukon premier if the territory was granted provincial status.

On the agenda for the talks will be financial matters, including discussions on the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation.

The leaders will discuss natural gas and oil pipelines and hydro development.

The B.C. Rail extension through to Alaska will also be discussed along with other transportation questions.

Premier Bennett and Gov. Hammond have said in the past the $2 billion extension is not likely to go ahead unless the U.S. federal government picks up most of the cost.

M-B seeks removal of pickets

MacMillan Bloedel wants the Labor Relations Board to remove pulp union pickets which shut the company's Chemainus lumber mill on Monday.

The company said it is seeking an LRB order to end the picketing.

Picket line was set up by members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, Local 8, which is on strike against the company's Harmac pulp mill.

The Harmac dispute, which centres around the union's claim that the company is trying to sell "hot pulp", spread to Chemainus because the PPWC says the company is refusing to settle the issue until the union signs a contract.

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke said Monday the Brannan Lake heroin treatment centre is avoiding patients with serious heroin problems because it wants to build a success record using those less difficult to cure.

The charge was denied by Health Minister Bob McClelland and Bert Hoskins, chairman of the B.C. Alcohol and Drug Commission.

Cocke referred specifically to the case of Geraldine Platko, who was sent to the centre after being convicted in May of heroin trafficking.

Earlier this month, Platko was involved in a hostage-taking incident to get more medication. When the incident ended, she was transferred to Oakalla regional correctional centre east of Vancouver.

Cocke said attempts by Platko to return to the centre, near Nanaimo on Vancouver Island, for further treatment have been unsuccessful because officials regard her as unmanageable.

Hoskins disagreed, saying Platko got to the point where she was a danger to herself as well as others and had to be transferred to a more secure facility.

No judgment on whether the centre would look good in statistics is made in accepting voluntary committals, he added.

Meanwhile, McClelland said that in a meeting with one of the government's patient assessment panels a month ago, he specifically said he did not want to see difficult patients turned away just so figures would look good.

The facility began accepting voluntary patients earlier this year and is eventually slated to accept people referred through the courts.

Fire hazard back

Warm, dry weather in the B.C. interior is bringing the fire hazard level back to high or extreme in most areas, a forests ministry spokesman said Monday.

Widespread rainfall in some of the hardest-hit areas of the province eased the situation last week, he said.

He said there were 396 fires burning in all areas, bringing the total number of fires this season to 3,212.

An outbreak at Naden Harbour in the Queen Charlotte Islands required water bomber action but this and all other fires are now under control, the spokesman said.

Students beef over transfers

A flood of protests from Victoria High School students has failed to block plans to transfer them to Central Junior High School on the late half of a split shift.

The school district office has been besieged with calls from students and parents since the notices went out that the $1.6 million renovations to Vic High will not be completed in time for the Sept. 4 term opening.

Instead, classes will be shifted to Central. Younger students will attend classes between 7:45 a.m. and 12:15 p.m., while high school classes will be conducted between 1 and 5:30 p.m.

School district spokesman Bill Stavdal said the decision to put older students on the afternoon shift was based on district educators' belief that younger students would not be able to concentrate on their studies in the late afternoon.

The split shift is expected to last at least three weeks, but renovations should be completed by Sept. 24. The Andrews gym and change rooms and the Fairey technical wing at Vic High are already available for classes.

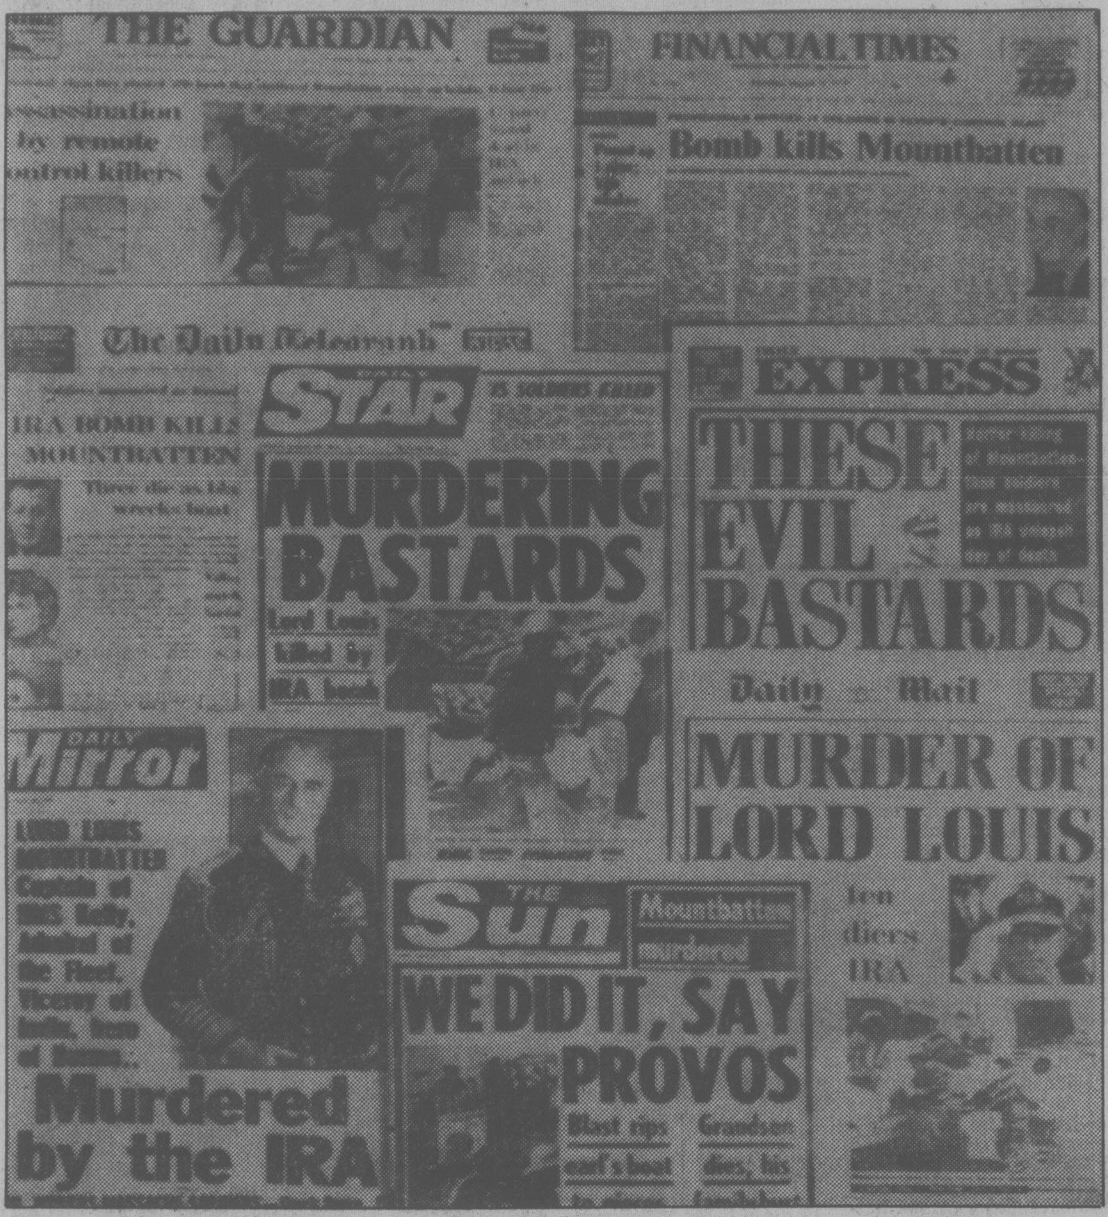
IRA attack enrages Britain



Britons awoke to these London newspaper headlines on Mountbatten murder

★

IRA blasts British army band

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A powerful bomb ripped through the medieval Grand Place in the heart of Brussels today just minutes before a British military band was to give a concert.

Four members of the band were among the 16 injured.

The blast shattered windows throughout the historic square and wrecked the outdoor platform on which the visiting British band was to have given a concert.

Officials said the casualty toll would undoubtedly have been much higher had it not been for a traffic jam that delayed the arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh's Royal Regiment military band.

"We were lucky because we arrived late," said bandsman Jack Hardy of Gloucester. "We were held up by a traffic jam getting into Brussels."

Only a few bandsmen and stagehands were on the platform at the time of the blast, setting up instruments.

The blast ripped apart the heavy wood and metal stage. Twisted, broken instruments lay scattered on the cobblestoned ground along with shards of glass from dozens of shattered windows in the cafe-lined square.

Customers sipping drinks at an outdoor cafe near the stage dived for cover as debris showered down. They apparently escaped serious injury because the force of the blast was directed upwards, police said.

Times News Services

The IRA murder of Earl Louis Mountbatten has enraged Britain like no other terrorist attack during the past decade of violence and strife associated with Britain's presence in Northern Ireland.

The sentiments of the nation were perhaps summed-up by a weeping John Barratt, Mountbatten's personal secretary, who exclaimed: "May the IRA rot in hell, the bastards!"

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Mountbatten's murder and the killing of 18 British soldiers from ambush the same day has added another page to the IRA's "catalogue of atrocity and cowardice."

Britain, she vowed, "will wage war against terrorism with relentless determination until it is won."

Some of the soldiers were killed outside Warrenpoint, near the east coast of Northern Ireland, when a bomb concealed beneath straw in a parked truck was set off as an army truck and Jeep drove past on patrol. The rest died after reinforcements arrived and a second bomb in an abandoned building was set off.

Shortly after, IRA gunmen in ambush opened fire from across a canal that forms the border between Northern Ireland and the republic at that point. The soldiers returned the fire.

Meanwhile, police in Mullaghmore, Ireland, said today the bomb that killed Mountbatten and three other persons may have been hidden in a lobster pot and set off by remote control when their boat sailed past.

Local residents reported seeing two divers going into the water near the pots before dawn Sunday.

Police said it also was possible a diver had planted the bomb under the boat itself and had wired it to go off five minutes after the boat's engine started.

While most of the world, from Pope to peasant in Indian village, where Mountbatten served as last British viceroy, mourned Tom Duffy, a spokesman for the IRA movement in the United States, bragged today in New York that Mountbatten's murder was justified as an act of war.

"The Irish Republican Army is waging a war on behalf of the Irish nation," Duffy said in a statement. "All members of the enemy camp are legitimate targets.

"During the Second World War, Hirohito of Japan or Hitler of Germany were not considered immune from the Allied guns.

"We wonder why the sympathy and the tears are so selective. They worry about a 79-year-old man, but they haven't said a word about all the young people that were killed over the years."

The lunatic fringe on the other side is also in full cry.

A veteran living in Mountbatten's home village of Romsey, Kent, was quoted in a news broadcast as advocating a vigilante army of old sweats "to go over there and clean them out."

A caller to a phone-in radio show suggested sending every Irish-born person in Britain back to Ulster and turning Northern Ireland into one vast concentration camp under military rule.

Gas price to top a dollar Thursday

The price of gasoline will rise at least 3.7 cents a gallon Thursday, pushing all Victoria-area pump prices for standard gas above $1 a gallon.

The present price at self-serve outlets is 97.9 or 21.2 a litre. The new prices Thursday will be at least $1.01.6 or 22 cents a litre.

Heating oil will also go up about three cents a gallon.

The gas increases are the result of two factors.

On July 1, Ottawa permitted the price of crude oil to rise $1 a gallon, sending the price of gasoline up 3.2 cents as of Aug. 30.

In addition, the federal government is adding half a cent a gallon to the price of gasoline for syncrude development.

John Plummer, provincial retail manager for Imperial Oil, said the 3.7 cents a gallon increase is automatic and will take effect as of midnight Wednesday.

The company had not yet decided whether to announce additional increases at the same time.

In Vancouver, where the price is 94.9 a gallon, three cents less than Victoria, oil companies are subsidizing the price by about 2 cents a gallon. If competition permits, oil companies would like to raise the price the additional two cents.

There is no subsidy in Victoria by Imperial but prices are considered to be artificially low in both cities. The markup would have to be increased at some point.

All oil companies will pass along the crude price increase in the form of higher gas prices on Thursday.

Dollar exchange

U.S. dollar at banks this morning bought $1.1640 Canadian, according to the Greater Victoria Information Centre.

U.S. prime rate up to record high level

By LEE M. COHN
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The United States' prime rate on bank loans to corporations was raised to a record 12¼ per cent today, continuing the escalation of interest rates generally.

Analysts had expected the increase. Many of them predict further rises as the Federal Reserve pursues its fight against inflation and heavy loan demand by business persists.

Interest rate increases could deepen the recession. The economic decline eventually will halt and perhaps reverse the rise of interest rates. Some analysts believe the rate peak is only weeks away.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest U.S. bank, led off the increase in the prime rate from 12 to 12¼ per cent. Chase also led the move Aug. 15 From 11¾ to 12 per cent, which matched the record set in 1974 near the start of a recession.

Most other banks are expected to follow the rise to a 12¼ per cent prime rate, which is the interest charged by banks on loans to corporations with the best credit ratings. Rates on lower-grade business loans also may go up, but consumer credit and home mortgage loans are not directly related to the corporate prime rate.

The Federal Reserve under its new chairman, Paul A. Volcker, has been pushing interest rates up in an effort to fight domestic inflation and strengthen the dollar abroad by curbing excessive growth of the money supply. Aside from substance, Volcker believes the Fed must vigorously demonstrate its commitment to restraining the price spiral in order to change inflation pshychology.

The increase in the Fe)'s rate target to 11¼ per cent last Friday was the immediate trigger for today's prime rate rise.

Partly because of the Fed's efforts to restrain growth of money and credit by increasing interest rates, the cost to banks of raising money for relending has climbed. Banks raise the prime rate they charge partly to cover these increasing costs.

Strong demand for credit is the other key factor boosting the prime rate. That demand is reflected in rising rates on commercial paper IOUs through which corporations borrow from each other. Since rates are going up on this competitive source of credit, banks can raise their rates without losing customers.

Interest rates usually decline as business demand for credit slackens in recessions. Rates have stayed up so far because credit demand has not yet tapered off and because the Fed is trying to tighten supplies of credit to fight inflation.

In Victoria, the Royal Bank's regional manager Roger Hemeon today said the move would force Canadian interest rates up again.

He said Canadians should expect an identical quarter point increase, pushing the prime rate to 12.75 per cent from 12.5 per cent.

The hike, forced by the American increase, would

Soccer playoff on TV?

There may be good news yet for those thousands of Vancouver Island soccer fans and everyone else who failed to get tickets for Wednesday night's Whitecaps game.

BCTV and Whitecap brass were huddled today in a bid to televise live the Empire Stadium playoff game against the New York Cosmos.

Every available ticket for the game was snapped up by fans and scalpers in a record 9½ hours Tuesday.

Fans lined up six deep for more than three blocks to get tickets for the playoff contest.

Scalpers were buying up to 50 tickets each and selling them to fans at the end of the line for $50 a shot. The highest ticket price is normally $8.

Whitecaps public relations director, Josh Keller, says a lot of Whitecaps supporters buy tickets in block for their offices and there was no way the club could change its policy of no limits on numbers in time for the big game.

The Whitecaps defeated the Cosmos 4-1 and 4-2 in regular season games.

Street kids get little help

Shirley Wakeham offers cafe counselling

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

This is the last in a three-part series on Victoria's "street kids" — 13 and 14-year-olds whom Times reporter Derek Sidenius found living lonely and rebellious lives.

The worst that can be said about society's treatment of children is that it has done nothing to help kids with problems.

The best that can be said is it has tried to tackle those problems in a piecemeal fashion.

An example is the province's way of helping a mentally disturbed child who is disposed to violence.

If he's under 12, there are excellent facilities for him.

If he's over, forget it. There's next to nothing available.

When the Eric Martin Institution was built, a special ward was included for just such cases. But it's hardly ever been used.

There has never been the staff, never the money, a hospital spokesman said.

And there are precious few counselling services offered for juvenile alcoholics.

George Stegan, executive director of the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society (DARS), admits little has been done in this area.

It isn't DARS fault entirely, he says. The society gets its funds from the Alcohol and Drug Commission. The commission funds mainly adult programs.

There's not been the staff or the money to provide adequate youth counselling services or give kids in jails a level of care equivalent to that given adults.

The Victoria Youth Services Unit is only able to handle a maximum of 70 kids. The reason: there are only seven social workers on staff. What they can't manage has to be farmed out to other social agencies or groups, such as the YM-YWCA, or turned over to regular social workers who aren't always trained in dealing with children's problems.

Children held in the Juvenile Detention Home have been subjected to appalling conditions. Until only a few months ago, when long-awaited renovations started, the facility was grossly overcrowded, inadequately lit, and poorly ventilated.

TOWN TALK

Redevelopment of the Oak Bay Village will restrict builders to four types of architectural design, no more than two of which can be in the same block on the same side of the street.

Let's not forget, however, that Elizabeth was a Tudor. And the William and Mary style is no different from the Elizabethan/Tudor style of dark wood beams surrounded by white walls.

So that leaves two different styles. Georgian is separated by a couple of hundred years from Tudor and emphasizes classical lines such as carved arches and colonades.

So there we have the new Oak Bay Village: two stark black and white Tudor buildings next to two light-colored arched Georgian buildings.

A Town Talk agent who was there says the Douglas Street entrance to the Empress Hotel was blocked for about an hour when the bleary-eyed bus jockey attempted to steal the bus from the Douglas Street depot.

The culprit clumsily rammed into a concrete abutment separating the parking lot from the driveway and then calmly stepped down from the bus and walked away. Game over.

Witnesses at first thought he was the bus driver and delayed calling police. By the time they twigged to what was going on the intrepid imbiber was long gone.

8 Americans face charges

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Charges are being laid against the skippers of eight American tuna boats arrested in Canadian waters, Fisheries Minister James McGrath said today.

Seven of the vessels were escorted into the Inner Harbor by the fisheries vessel Tanu just before midnight.

The eighth vessel, the Four Cs of San Pedro, was brought in by the fisheries vessel Laurier this morning.

Dr. Wally Johnson, Canadian fisheries regional director in Vancouver, refused comment on what specific charges will be laid until he consults with other fisheries officials.

But in Ottawa, McGrath made it clear that court action will be taken.

The exact charges would be drawn up after the holds and fishing gear of the eight vessels had been inspected.

Paul Glasoe of the United States consulate in Vancouver, made it clear however, there are strong political undertones involved.

He said the issue is too complicated and contentious to discuss and told reporters: "Washington D.C. is the place to find the answer ."

He said he is in Victoria solely "to make sure everybody gets a fair shake."

Lew Wright, general manager of the Western Fishboat Owners Association, also indicated the seizure will test whether or not the United States recognizes Canada's 200-mile limit.

Wright said the limit should not apply to albacore tuna, because it is a highly migratory fish, spawned in salt water.

He said the eight boats had not set out intentionally to make this a test case but it appears to be rapidly turning into one.

Canadian fisheries officials said five of the vessels had refused to stop until the Tanu put an observer aboard each one.

Wright said however, relations had been co-operative, not hostile.

He said the main thing is to have bonds posted so that the vessels can carry on fishing.

Wright said he had been told officially this morning that the skippers were to be charged with being in Canadian waters illegally.

Depending on the exact wording of the charges, the skippers could face fines, seizure of cargoes, impounding of theor vessels and in aome cases, jail terms.

Wright said that fishing vessels of any nation can fish for tuna outside a three-mile limit in American waters.

He said tuna follow regular migratory patterns and admitted there could well be other American boats fishing for tuna off the Canadian coast. He said he did not know how many.

In Ottawa, McGrath said the rights of west coast fishermen will be protected.

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said today the seizure emphasises the need for a much larger coast guard if Canada is serious about protecting its sovereignty.

He said the seizure is an indication of what is to come, adding that Canada has the longest coastline in the world and the smallest coast guard.

Hanson said it is important that Canada have a recognizable presence to patrol the 200-mile limit.

The NDP MLA also said it is important that an adequate program be developed to protect and enhance our fish stocks.

In Victoria provincial court today, a Port Townsend fisherman was fined $750 and ordered to forfeit a $254.85 catch after being charged with fishing illegally in Canadian waters.

The court was told fisheries officers saw Leo Linehan, 42, almost two kilometeres inside Canadian waters near Port Renfrew.

Wallace may run for mayor

Wallace, 50, retired from active politics in 1977 to resume a full-time medical practice after resigning as Tory leader.

Wallace, who once served as an Oak Bay alderman, said today he is investigating the time demands and if they look too heavy, he will not be a candidate.

"Much as I enjoy medicine I appreciate having some other challenge in life," Wallace said.

Wallace said the response so far from people who have talked to him about the mayor's job seems favorable.

"It's something I'd like to do, but I don't know whether I can combine the demands of both jobs. If I don't think I can, I'll scrap the idea."

Political ploy suspected in newest design panel

An advisory design panel approved by Saanich council Monday could be little more than a political ploy, Royal Oak Community Association president Graham Hunter said today.

Hunter is one of the six members nominated by the association to sit on the panel which will make recommendations on applications for development permits in the Royal Oak industrial park.

Other members are: assistant municipal planner Allan Hopper, Peter Arn, Margaret Kinsley, Robert Richards and Arthur Kool. The seventh member will be appointed from the industrial park property owners.

Hunter said his association is still doing everything possible to have the industrial park scrapped.

But he said he favors the community-based panel, even if it's only an attempt to enhance the industrial park project, now waiting highways ministry approval.

"In theory it gives us some measure of protection. In reality it may give us none," Hunter said.

Creating the advisory panel in the first place was the community association's idea, even though Mayor Mel Couvelier gives the impression that he thought of it first, he said.

Saanich already has an advisory design panel and an advisory planning commission.

Hunter said he doesn't know how the new panel will fit in with the existing ones.

The executive will request a meeting soon with Highways Minister Alex Fraser to discuss various concerns, including traffic problems it is feared the park will create.

Saanich's failure to design an adequate traffic system is grounds for highways to reject the proposal, Hunter maintains.

He hopes the meeting will be held before Fraser passes judgment on the project.

Curtis has said he will convey his disapproval to both highways and municipal affairs ministries.

Saanich needs approval from both ministries before it can pass bylaws creating the industrial zone.

Mayor Couvelier said last week any delays will be attributed to political interference. Saanich expects approval by Sept. 10.

Hunter said the ratepayers want to know how council plans to accommodate an increase in heavy traffic to and from the proposed industrial area.

Saanich has rejected Fraser's suggestions for new routes to handle the traffic, Hunter said.

Council on May 30 turned down proposals to widen Glanford to four lanes and to build a road linking the Pat Bay Highway and Wilkinson Road.

Council is divided over the industrial park proposal, which has caused disruption and bitterness and on that basis alone it should be scrapped, Hunter said.

Growing residential development in the area is anther ratepayer objection to the park.

There has been no evidence to indicate the project is economically necessary or viable, Hunter said.

Q. How big is Vancouver Island? S.D.

A. It has an area of 12,408 square miles. Its length from northwest to southeast is 285 miles and its maximum width 65 miles.

Two boys injured

Two juveniles were injured when a stolen car being chased by Saanich police crashed into a telephone pole on Alderman Street in Esquimalt early today.

The boys, aged 13 and 15, are in hospital, one with a possible broken leg and the other with head injuries. Both are in good condition.

A 16-year-old boy police said was driving the car was uninjured in the 2 a.m. accident.

He was charged with car theft and later released to his parents pending an appearance in family court.
